Gillette Calls Outside Foes 'Wolves' on Iowa Vote Eve

Fate of New Deal Declared at Stake

Political Developments.

The American Federation of Labor warned Congress it would unalterably oppose any wage-hour legislation which failed to provide for a universal wage minimum and hour maximum.

With most of the returns in, Senator Reynolds piled up a better than 90,000-vote lead over Representative Hancock in the North Carolina Senatorial race.

Iowa Votes Today.

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 5.—Iowa's "New Deal" Democratic primary campaign moved into the stretch tonight for tomorrow's vote with Senator Guy M. Gillette, candidate for renomination, declaring he had not been "and will not be a rubber stamp member of Congress." He called outsiders who have entered the campaign "political wolves."

Gillette expressed his refusal "to support, as a blindfolded legislator, every piece of legislation presented to the Congress by the bureaus and departments of our Government prepared and drawn for these bureaus for furthering their bureaucratic interest."

Wearin tonight issued a statement at Dubuque, Iowa, declaring "the fate of the New Deal is in the hands of the people of Iowa."

"We are optimistic about the outcome of tomorrow's election and confident that President Roosevelt and all he stands for will come out on top," he said. "The issue is clear. It is simply a question of whether Iowa wants to go forward with Roosevelt or backward with his enemies. I am for going forward and my whole campaign has been based on that resolution."

Under Iowa law, 35 per cent of the party primary vote is necessary for nomination. If no candidate receives the necessary percentage, the nomination is made in convention.

Meanwhile, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, stepped into the battle with a telegraphic indorsement of Gillette.

"Are those you represent going to turn down a United States Sen-

O'Connor Refutes Report He'll Quit California Race

J. F. T. O'Connor's campaign manager yesterday telegraphed The Washington Post a vehement denial that the former Comptroller of the Currency was considering abandoning the California gubernatorial race.

Reports were published last Friday that friends of the breezy official had heard he would quit the contest and try to get his old job back as Comptroller. The reports were given credence because the post has remained vacant since he resigned January 20, effective on April 1.

Ransom Bills Final Hope in Florida Case

G-Men Hunt Money as Search Fails; Boy Like Cash Seen Here.

By the United Press.

Princeton, Fla., June 5.—G-men tonight pinned their hopes for early solution of the kidnaping of 5-year-old Jimmy Cash on appearance of bills in the $10,000 ransom paid by James B. Cash, sr., for return of his only son.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents, under direction of head G-man J. Edgar Hoover, concentrated efforts on apprehending the kidnaper, or kidnapers, through the ransom money after a fruitless eight-day search of the southern tip of Florida.

The chartered plane which brought Hoover from Washington to Miami, left Miami at 4:30 p. m., but it was not known whether Hoover was on it.

A Government nurse yesterday told Washington police she had seen a child who answered the description of James B. Cash, jr., 5-year-old Florida kidnap victim.

The nurse, Miss Anna Lewis of 930 Sixteenth street northwest, attached to Walter Reed Hospital, said she saw the child, accompanied by a middle-aged white man and woman, in a restaurant at Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Crashes Kill Md. Senator, D. C. Officer

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., June 5.—State Senator Harold E. Cobourn was fatally injured today in an automobile crash as he returned from an election campaign tour on the Eastern Shore.

The Cecil County Democrat died in Union Hospital, Elkton, at 3 a. m. today from head injuries suffered two hours earlier when his automobile overturned twice after colliding with an automobile driven by Charles Collins, 22, of Bay View, Md.

Cobourn, 44, completing his first term in the Senate, had announced his candidacy for associate judgeship of the Second Judicial Circuit, which covers Cecil, Kent, Caroline, Queen Anne and Talbot counties, and was campaigning in opposition to Judge Thomas J. Keating, of Centreville.

Motorcycle Patrolman Richard T. Conklin, attached to the Sixth Precinct, was killed yesterday when his motorcycle skidded on a car track and overturned on Georgia avenue near Butternut street northwest, two blocks from where Motorcycle Patrolman Ernest T. Wessells was killed when his machine collided with a street car April 23.

Hurled 35 feet, Conklin was rushed in a taxicab to Walter Reed Hospital by Patrolman Bruce Manners, also of the Sixth Precinct, who saw the crash. Conklin died half an hour after reaching the hospital.

His death was the thirty-fifth attributed to traffic in Washington this year.

Precinct station flags will fly at half staff until after the funeral, arrangements for which have not been completed.

In November, 1928, Conklin achieved brief renown when he battled a mob in the 1900 block Fourteenth street and retained a colored prisoner whom several hundred persons attempted to rescue.

Green Threatens Pay Bill Fight If Differentials Are Allowed

The American Federation of Labor yesterday warned Capitol Hill it was prepared to fight any wage-hour legislation that did not contain universal minimum wage and maximum hour provisions, in a statement that drew an immediate response from Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the House and Senate conferees on the bill.

The statement was issued by William Green, A. F. L. president, as members of the conference committee prepared to renew today attempts to reconcile differences in the two bills. In a carefully worded reference to it, Thomas warned against "any friend of labor" attempting to condemn either House or Senate bill.

"We must never lose sight of the fact that both of them have fine theories and the objectives are the same," he said. "I don't see how any friend of labor can conscientiously condemn either."

While the conferees looked forward to reaching an agreement this week, President Roosevelt lent impetus to the drive for adjournment by summoning his legislative leaders to a strategy meeting today.

Paris Accepts 45,000 Tons As Navy Limit

Present 35,000-Ton Plan Stands Unless Italy, Reich Increase.

By the United Press.

Paris, June 5.—France has joined the United States and Great Britain in a decision to limit the size of new warships for the time being to 45,000 tons and restrict gun calibers to 16 inches, it was revealed tonight.

Formal announcement of the agreement was expected to be made soon in Washington and London.

The agreement will not affect France's present naval program, based on the 35,000-ton limitations of the 1936 London Naval Treaty, unless Italy and Germany decide to build larger capital ships.

The French government is building two capital ships and has ordered two others laid down. Each will carry eight 15-inch guns, although 16-inch guns can be substituted later, according to the agreement with London and Washington.

Both Britain and the United States used the "escalator" clause of the London Treaty calling for consultation between signatory nations when it is believed that a non-signatory nation (Japan, in this instance) is exceeding the treaty limitations, in order to escape the old 35,000-ton and 14-inch gun restrictions.

Although no official notification has been given, French naval experts believe Great Britain's new capital ships will be only 42,000 tons, compared to America's contemplated 45,000-ton ships. Both countries will install 16-inch guns, it is believed.

British to Give In to U. S.

By the Associated Press.

The United States and Great Britain soon will announce an agreement on the size of new superbattleships and the heavy guns they will carry, a State Department official said yesterday.

It was indicated the agreement would be along the lines of the recent American proposal for 45,000-ton ships armed with 16-inch guns. Negotiators have been deadlocked over the question of size and armament of the dreadnaughts. The negotiations were begun after both powers announced their intension of invoking the escalator clause of the London Naval Treaty and building ships larger than the 35,000 tons the treaty allows.

The United States did not want any limit on new ships because information regarding Japanese building was not comprehensive. The British then proposed a limit of 42,000 tons.

The United States met Britain part way by giving up the idea of 18-inch guns.

Davies, Stalin Talk 2 Hours as Envoy Plans to Depart

Moscow, June 5 (AP).—United States Ambassador Joseph E. Davies, unaccompanied, talked "world affairs" for two hours today with Joseph Stalin, at the Kremlin where he said a formal farewell before departing Friday for his new post in Belgium.

Davies paid his respects to Vyacheslaff Molotoff, president of the council of peoples' commissars. "Mr. Stalin joined our discussion which lasted two hours," Davies said later.

Davies' meeting with Stalin was considered an even more important deviation from the Soviet chieftain's custom than Stalin's meeting with former United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt.

Unlike the meeting with Bullitt, the Davies meeting was the occasion for a formal announcement by the Soviet foreign office. Davies is the only foreigner known to have talked with Stalin in more than a year.

30,000 Mormons Fast to Help Poor

Phoenix, Ariz., June 5 (U.P.).—Thirty thousand Arizona Mormons ate only one meal today in order that the balance of their day's food budget could go to the church for financing a security program to take members of the faith off direct Government relief.

As part of a broad program to allow the Mormon Church to "take care of its own," the Arizona ward leaders announced they had raised more than $10,000 during the day of fasting and prayer.

Sky Fleet From Spain Penetrates 50 Miles, Blasts Power Line.

Extent Indicates 'Deliberate' Raid

Bring Down Invaders, Daladier Orders; No Deaths in Attack.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 5.—Official investigation of a daring raid of nine bombing planes from Spain over French territory tonight disclosed the raiders penetrated 50 miles into France.

Investigators telegraphed the information to Paris, where Premier Daladier already had ordered French warplanes to bring down any foreign planes crossing the Spanish frontier.

Witnesses said the bombers, of "unknown nationality," followed the course of the Ariege River and the railway which parallels it. The railroad leading to the Spanish border at Puigcerda is one of the two main rail routes for sending supplies into government spain.

May Have Been Deliberate.

The fact the planes followed the railway despite a light fog and penetrated so deeply within France, indicated the raid might have been deliberate instead of what one French official called "a mistake due to bad flying judgment."

Witnesses said the planes flew as far as Tarascon-sur-Ariege, which is only 10 miles south of Foix, capital of Ariege Department, before turning back and dropping bombs near the Orlu power plant.

One bomb blasted electric power lines from the plant at Orlu, and another exploded near the track of the main Trans-Pyrenees Railroad from Toulouse to Barcelona.

No deaths or injuries were reported. Most bombs fell in open fields.

Protest Planned.

"Pursue all planes of whatever nationality which threaten French territory in the Pyrences region," Daladier instructed the French air force in a brief communique which gave no further details of how defense would be carried out.

A foreign office spokesman said an energetic protest would be made as soon as it was determined from which side of the Spanish civil war the raiders came.

The prefect of Ariege Department telegraphed to Daladier, asking him to take stern measures to prevent repetition of the incident.

Senator Paul Laffont of Ariege Department visited the bombarded

2 Va. Boys Jailed; Took White House For Movie Palace

Two adventurous schoolboys from Richmond, Va., spent last night at the Receiving Home because the White House, in their eyes, was a movie palace.

James Applegate and Morgan Bissett, both 15, told police they hitchhiked to Washington yesterday to see the town. Aimless wandering took them to a big white building in a wide lawn surrounded by an iron fence. They assumed it was a picture palace and decided to see the show.

So they climbed the fence to take a short cut. Private George Assay of White House police spied them astride the fence and hauled them down. Their parents were notified.

Wife of Cedillo Seized; 150 Give Up, but He Flees

Mexico City, June 5 (U.P.).—Federal troops today swooped on the headquarters of rebel Gen. Saturnino Cedrillo near the town of San Juan Del Meco and captured "several prisoners," including Cedillo's common law wife, newspaper dispatches reported.

The San Luis Potosi correspondent of the newspaper El Nacional said the raid was carried out unexpectedly upon the town, near the border of San Luis Potosi and Tamaulipas.

Official reports said 150 Cedillistas had surrendered and Cedillo himself had a narrow escape into the mountains.

Canton Raids Kill 200; 300,000 Flee Hankow

By the United Press.

Hankow, China (Monday), June 6.—The vanguard of approximately 300,000 civilian inhabitants began evacuating this city early today, streaming southward toward Yunnanfu as Japanese armies in the north rolled along the Lunghai Railroad in a rock-crusher drive on Hankow.

Chinese forces defending Lanfeng on the Lunghai east of Chengchow were in full retreat, the city was reoccupied by Japanese according to reports from both sides, and communication with Kaifeng has been cut off, according to Chinese headquarters.

The Peiping correspondent of the Japanese Domei News Agency at Tokyo reported today Japanese forces had occupied the city of Kaifeng.

The supreme command of the Chinese armies met at an undisclosed place last night and mapped final plans for defense of Hankow. Evacuation of civilians was begun "in order to avoid massacres by indiscriminate bombing of Hankow."

Chinese officials said the first batches of civilians had been sent southward, and the rest of the civil population would be evacuated within three weeks. The evacuation was orderly, with hundreds moving along the highways toward the interior in all kinds of conveyances.

Foreign military observers believed the evacuation means the Chinese have determined to defend the city instead of withdrawing, as they did at Nanking. If the plan is Japanese Bombs Bury Hundreds in Debris; Civilians Trapped.

By the Associated Press.

Hongkong, June 5.—Fifty Japanese warplanes attacking in relays killed an estimated 200 Chinese in Canton today in an air raid lasting more than an hour.

[Japanese warplanes also returned to Canton early Monday, dropping bombs on the center of the city, the United Press said.

[Ten Japanese craft arrived over the city at 8:30 a. m. and apparently aimed their assault at government buildings.—Editor's note.]

The bombing followed raids yesterday in which the reported casualties in the heart of the south China metropolis alone were 1,000 dead and 1,000 injured.

It marked the seventh day of air attacks since a week ago yesterday, with officials placing the complete reported casualties at 5,000.

Current raids have carried to a peak of destruction the aerial drive begun last year to end Canton's usefulness as the gateway for Chinese supplies.

The Wongsha and Taishatou railway stations and government buildings were the principal targets today. Six bombs fell on the Wongsha station area, all striking and demolishing locomotive sheds.

Railway lines also were attacked heavily, including the junction of the Canton-Kowloon Railway leading to Hongkong and the Canton-Hankow system.

The warplanes, coming over in units of five or six, launched their attacks shortly before noon and

Slovaks Prepare to Join Reich Or Poles if Denied Autonomy

By the United Press.

Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, June 5.—Mgr. Andrej Hlinka, leader of Czechoslovakia's 2,300,000 Slovaks, announced tonight the Province of Slovakia will break away and become a part of Germany or Poland unless the government grants it autonomy.

The threat of the 73-year-old Catholic leader, made following a mass meeting here of 100,000 Slovaks who booed and hissed the Prague government, thrust before Premier Milan Hodza a new "minority" problem which might become as serious as that involving the country's 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans.

Hodza arrived in Bratislava tonight and will make a direct answer to Father Hlinka's demands tomorrow in a speech from the balcony of the State Theater to Slovak members of the government coalition.

Reports from Prague tonight said Konrad Henlein, leader of the Sudeten German minority in Czechoslovakia, crossed the frontier at noon and might be en route to confer with Fuehrer Adolf Hitler of Germany.

Queipo de Llano Rumored Missing

By the Associated Press.

Bayonne, France, June 5.—High Spanish insurgent sources reported today Gen. Franco had held an urgent meeting of his military leaders following fights between insurgent and Italian officers at Malaga and Zaragoza.

These sources said the insurgent and Italian officers, fighting together against government Spain, fought each other with fists and revolvers last Sunday, day set aside for festivities celebrating "Italian and Spanish solidarity."

Bitterness Reported.

Several Spanish officers were arrested.

Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano, broadcasting commander and leader of Franco's forces in the south, and Gen. Jose Moscardo were reported among high officers attending the general staff conference at Burgos, capital of insurgent Spain.

[Twenty-five Spanish insurgents were reported executed at dawn today in a cemetery at Lalinea, Spanish insurgent town four miles north of Gibraltar, after wholesale arrests to stamp out dissension in Gen. Franco's ranks, the United Press said.

[Simultaneously loyalist reports told of an insurgent revolt in southern Andalusia and the rumored "disappearance" of Gen. Queipo de Llano from his headquarters at Seville.]

[Other reports indicated the Franco regime at Burgos had ordered a reinforcement of frontier guards, both in the north and south, and strict vigilance over all persons attempting to enter and leave insurgent-held territory.]

Leaflets Cause Arrests.

[The wholesale arrests at Lalinea, a base for German and Italian technicians and military experts aiding Franco, were said to have been started late Saturday after the appearance of thousands of leaflets with the slogan, "Down with fascism, long live the republic!" Walls were marked similarly.—Editor's note.]

Increasing reports of bitterness against Italian and German influence in insurgent Spain were brought to Gibraltar Saturday by travelers coming across the border and by insurgent officers.

"The dictatorial manner of the Italian officers is unbearable," said one officer. He attributed unrest in insurgent circles to discord between staff officers and the Germans and Italians.)

Other arrivals at Gibraltar said feeling had been aroused by fears among insurgent officers that the Italians and Germans intended to maintain a military hold on the

Nazis Will Share China, Is Report

London, June 5 (U.P.).—Reliable informants told the United Press tonight that Japan had given Germany "sweeping assurances" that when hostilities cease in China Japan will be ready to grant Germany an important share in the economic exploitation of the conquered areas.

The informants said the Japanese assurances were given in return for Chancellor Hitler's ordering home of the German military advisers who had been instructing the Chinere army and cutting off German sales of munitions to the Hankow government.

AFL Threatens Pay Bill if It Is Made Flexible

Congress

with the object of enabling Congress to quit by Friday night.

The "strategists" will seek to accelerate action on the $3,723,000,000 lending-spending bill, as well as the wage-hour proposal; the pure food and drug, merchant marine, $300,000,000 second deficiency and monopoly inquiry measures and a number of miscellaneous appropriations.

Green's statement on wage-hour legislation said:

"The American Federation of Labor insists on three fundamental requirements in any wage-hour legislation adopted by Congress.

"1. The law must establish a universal floor for wages.

"2. It must provide a universal ceiling for hours of work.

"3. It must be simple in administration.

Senate Bill Opposed.

"For these reasons, the American Federation of Labor supports the House bill which embodies the three essential requirements for a sound and workable law.

"The American Federation of Labor is unalterably opposed to the Senate bill because it actually is not a minimum wage and maximum hour bill at all. It fails to establish a definite and universal floor below which wages cannot descend and universal ceiling above which the hours of work cannot rise."

The conferees recessed Saturday after a session that climaxed a series of unsuccessful attempts to adjust principal differences. It was deadlocked over a "five-year plan," submitted by Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and providing that wage minimums be increased 3 cents an hour per year from 25 cents to 40 cents. This is a modification of the House measure, which calls for 5-cent-an-hour increases for three years.

Southern members, holding out for a lower wage rate than would prevail in the East and North, are opposing Walsh's plan because it provides for no exemptions. They maintain that freight rates are unfavorable in the South and that living conditions are lower.

Thomas Warns of Courts.

The Senate bill calls for a five-man national labor standards board to impose an immediate 40-cent-an hour minimum wage and a 40-hour-maximum work week, but with broad powers to make exemptions.

Thomas, who yesterday pointed out that "we cannot afford to rush into any measure that will not stand a court test," emphasized that the main obstacle to agreement within the committee lay in the method of administration of the proposal's provisions.

Filibuster threats against the wage-hour proposal have quieted down, but from Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, came a warning yesterday that he would manage to hold Congress in session until it approved his plan to issue currency against $12,000,000,000 in gold "buried in Kentucky."

With the comment that "all we are doing now is sprinkling legislative talcum powder on the running sore of unemployment, Representative Barton (Republican), of New York, announced he would introduce in the House today seven resolutions calling for investigations of the "seven deadly sores" on our economic body.

Barton listed the "sores" as the farm problem, unemployment and relief, social security, the problem of a tax program "designed to stimulate instead of to strangle industry," the reciprocal trade policy, Government competition with private industry, especially in the utilities field, and the railroad problem.

Cost Set at $350,000.

Barton said his resolutions would call for inquiries by joint Congressional commissions, each of which would include two persons not connected with the Government. They would call for reports to Congress by next January 3, with suggestions for remedial legislation. The sum of $50,000 would be appropriated for each commission.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, was advised yesterday by representatives of 14 national organizations that they would seek a Presidential veto unless the court review the section written into his pure food, drug and cosmetic legislation by the House, was eliminated in conference.

Organizations represented by the protestants were the American Association of University Women, American Dietetic Association, American Home Economics Association, American Nurses Association, Girls Friendly Society of the U. S. A., Council of Women for Home Missions, American Medical Women's Association, National Board of the Y. W. C. A., National Congress of Parents and Teachers, National Council of Jewish Women, National League of Women Voters, National Women's Trade Union League, Women's Homeopathic Medical Fraternity and the National Consumers League.

Etheridge Calls Six-Month Radio Licenses Unfair

By the Associated Press.

Mark Etheridge, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, last night said the practice of licensing radio stations for six-month periods was "grossly unfair" and "against the public interest." He said Congress had authorized the Federal Communications Commission to issue three-year licenses.

"The very fact that a Democratic commission considers it necessary to license all broadcasters for six months when Congress considered a three-year license a probably sufficient check upon possible irresponsibilities seems to me to put the commission in a position which is capable of being misunderstood by the country—and that certainly is misunderstood by the broadcasters."

The association announced it would oppose continuation of short-term licensing at hearings starting today before the commission.

Mrs. Harlan F. Stone Devotes Half Her Day to Civic Activities

By Christine Sadler

The Instructive Visiting Nurse Society—popularly known as Washington's "hospital without walls"—last year gave nursing aid and health instruction to 25,601 patients. Seventy per cent of the 167,972 visits made were free, although the society's services are available also on a pay or part-pay basis.

Serving her third year as president of the 38-year-old organization is Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of the United States Supreme Court Justice, who took little time out for welfare work while her family was growing up but who now devotes just about half her day to civic activities.

In addition to being president of the nursing society, she serves also as head of the Washington chapter of the Travelers Aid Society, chairman of the board of trustees for the Washington Y. W. C. A., on the board of the Council of Social Agencies, and trustee of the Community Chest.

She is particularly interested in health. "I have always thought health very important in this world. One cannot do much on any job without it," she says.

More Nurses Needed.

Washington's health facilities have improved a good deal within the past few years, she feels, and believes they will continue to do so. She is a member of Dr. Ruhland's advisory committee on public health problems and is eager to see its program furthered.

The I. V. N. S. has 77 nurses on duty. "We need at least 50 more, according to all surveys. If we had a total of 125 we would feel we were well equipped," she declares. The organization is a charter member of the Community Chest, from which it receives about two-thirds of its support. Until the Chest was organized it was supported almost entirely by private philanthropy.

Other sources of revenue are an endowment fund, insurance companies and donations. For the sum of $100, a day can be endowed in the name of an individual or group, and designated as a memorial day.

Mrs. Stone finds civic work exceedingly interesting. "I feel, too, that by so using my time I am doing something worth while. And there is a satisfaction in that.

"Before coming to Washington I had done very little, except to work for the Red Cross during the war days. My family had first call on me as long as my time was needed, I always thought. The first work I undertook here was that of serving on the Y. W. C. A. board. I stayed on that job for several years and then became chairman of the Y. W. C. A. board of trustees, which meets occasionally as the need arises."

When summer comes Mrs. Stone finds time to indulge in the pursuit of her favorite hobby—painting with water colors. Almost entirely self taught, she has developed her talent as an artist to the point where directors of the Corcoran Gallery of Art during the past winter asked her to exhibit her pictures in one of their special shows.

If she holds another show next winter, it doubtless will contain water colors depicting California and Canadian scenes, for she and Justice Stone are leaving for the West Coast this Wednesday and will visit in Canada before going on to their summer island home off the coast of Maine.

The Stone "children" are two sons—Marshall H., who is a professor of mathematics at Harvard University, and Lauson H., who has followed in his father's footsteps and is a member of the legal profession in New York City.

Pictures of the seven are to be found in the Stone home at 2340 Wyoming avenue northwest, along with collected paintings and etchings and Mrs. Stone's water colors. Although rarely playing "for company," Mrs. Stone is also an accomplished pianist.

On Wednesday—Ross Garrett, director of the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals in the District, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Pay Bill Protects Unorganized, Say Ellender, Walsh

By the Associated Press.

Senators Walsh (Democrat) Massachusetts, and Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, members of the joint conference committee on wage-hour legislation, said in a radio discussion last night that the wage-hour law was designed to protect workers who were not organized for collective bargaining.

"Through this measure," Walsh said, "the Government is attempting to provide collective bargaining facilities for only the lowest paid class wage-earners who are not organized; who may be working in small industries where there is no opportunity for the employes to organize and who may be subject to the tyranny of sweatshop employers or child labor exploiters."

Ellender spoke similarly about the purposes of the legislation, but said he was "unalterably" opposed to the principle that Congress should fix inflexible wage and hour standards. He said he feared that under such a plan "politics will be the governing factor rather than economics."

Interest Rates In Refinancing At Record Low

By the United Press.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday announced a program to refinance $1,214,472,900 in notes June 15 at the lowest interest rates for this type of offering in the history of Federal financing.

Holders of $618,056,800 of 2⅛ per cent notes, maturing June 15, and of $596,416,100 of 2½ per cent notes maturing September 15, are offered the right to exchange their securities for either 20 to 25-year 2¾ per cent bonds or five-year 1⅛ per cent notes.

The June 15 financing program will involve no quest for new money. A $250,000,000 short-term bill issue, which comes due June 16, 17 and 18, will be redeemed for cash. The bill financing program for the first quarter of the new fiscal year, beginning July 1, has been arranged so that by August 31 there will be a net reduction of $200,000,000 to $1,300,000,000 in the aggregate of outstanding bill issues.

Would "Clear the Decks."

In announcing plans to refund the September note issue with the June note maturities, Morgenthau said he was "clearing the decks" for new cash borrowing expected to be necessary under the Administration's lending-spending program by mid-September. The Treasury is believed to have sufficient available cash to meet spending needs during the first quarter of the next fiscal year.

September note-holders who converted their securities into the new notes will be given an interest adjustment amounting to $3.42 on each $1,000. This is intended to compensate them for what they would have earned had they held their securities to September 15, date of maturity. However, if they do not wish to make the exchange either for the new notes or bonds, they will be paid off in cash in September. June note-holders not taking advantage of the conversion offer will be paid off in cash June 15.

Fear Cut in Bond Yield.

Experts believe the compelling reason for the large-scale refinancing operations is fear that redemption for cash of all or a large part of the maturing issues would result in boosting the Government bond market "through the roof."

Redemption for cash would have increased the excess reserves of banks, they pointed out. Banks, seeking to find a productive use for these additional funds, would go into the Government bond market. This large-scale buying, they explained, would result in boosting the prices of Government bonds and at the same time lower their yield.

Both the new bonds and notes will bear tax-exemption features. The bonds will mature June 15, 1963, but may be redeemed at the option of the Treasury on and after June 15, 1958. They will be issued in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000 and $100,000.

Notes Mature in 1943.

The notes will mature June 15, 1943, and will not be subject to call for redemption before that date. They will be issued in the same denominations as the bonds, except that there will be no $50 notes.

The Treasury's working balance, which contains the ready cash needed for current Government operations, now stands at approximately $2,000,000,000. It will be bolstered this month by June quarter income tax installment payments expected to aggregate $540,000,000.

After redemption of the $250,000,000 in maturing bills in mid-June and payment of $190,000,000 interest on the public debt, the Treasury probably will start the new fiscal year with a working balance in excess of $2,000,000,000. Revenue from other sources is expected to take care of June spending requirements.

Reynolds Wins By 90,000 in Carolina Race

All Representatives Asking Re-election Victors in Primary.

By the Associated Press.

Raleigh, N. C., June 5.—A sweeping victory for Senator Robert R. Reynolds was conceded today by his opponent — Representative Frank W. Hancock, jr.—as late returns from the Democratic primary for the United States Senate nomination pushed Reynolds' majority to more than 90,000 votes.

When the vote in yesterday's primary had been reported from 1,600 of the State's 1,862 precincts, Reynolds had 272,051 ballots, compared with 180,011 for Hancock.

Representatives in Congress who had opposition won renomination without exception, on the face of fairly complete returns. Chief interest centered in the three districts in which incumbents did not seek re-election.

Winborne Beats Grady.

In the only State-wide race besides the Reynolds-Hancock contest, Utilities Commissioner Stanley Winborne defeated Paul Grady, of Kenly, former legislator, upon the basis of returns from more than three-fourths of the State's precincts.

The vote in 1,565 precincts—Winborne, 217,469; Grady, 163,925.

The Congressional races:

Bulwinkle, Weaver Win

Sixth, complete—R. H. Watkins, 358; George Penny, 2,917; J. O. Atkinson, jr., 6,796; Lewis E. Teague, 10,360; Barnie P. Jones, 4,672; Bruce H. Carraway, 983; Oscar G. Barker, 8,970; Edney Ridge, 6,847.

Eigth, 191 of 202—George Ross, 8,057; Roland F. Beasley, 9,278; C. B. Deane, 12,861; Giles Y. Newton, 1,363; William O. Burgin, 12,153.

'Pulse' of Brain Taken to Predict Mental Disorders

San Francisco, June 5 (AP).—A new electrical key to mental disorders, which opens the way for curing them and for preventing minds from "cracking," was reported to the American Psychiatric Association here today.

The key is the encephalograph, an instrument which shows that all brains beat in a regular pulse of rising and falling electric current. This brain "pulse," in mental disorder, gets either too fast or too slow.

Methods of reading this "pulse" so as to recognize the onset of mental disorders before they are apparent ever to a doctor have been worked out by Dr. Frederic A. Gibbs, Mrs. Emma L. Gibbs and Dr. William G. Lennox, of Harvard Medical School, Boston.

Billion-Dollar Liquor Revenue In 1937 Sets Repeal Record

Liquor revenue passed the billion-dollar mark in 1937, according to figures made public today by the Distilled Spirits Institute. The total—$1,022,275,727—was the highest in the repeal era.

Federal income from internal revenue and customs duties amounted to $632,929,543; State monopoly profits, license and tax revenues totaled $305,771,547, and county and municipal taxes aggregated $33,574,635. Miscellaneous Federal, State and local taxes brought in about $50,000,000.

The money accounted for about one-twelfth of all the revenue collected by Federal, State and local governments in 1937. It constituted the third most important source of all governmental income, being exceeded only by property and income taxation. It was second to income taxation as a form of Federal income.

"State ABC revenues," said the Distilled Spirits Institute, "have played a large and socially significant part in the underwriting of the humanitarian projects—old age pensions, unemployment compensation, relief and the like.

The institute warned that the alcoholic beverage industry, as a revenue-producing machine, has reached a point of maximum efficiency.

Kuhn Plans Ten New Nazi Camps

Andover, N. J., June 5 (AP).—Bundesfuehrer Fritz Kuhn, at the first anniversary of Camp Nordland today, announced the German-American Bund would open ten new camps in the United States this summer to bring to 32 the national total.

Kuhn told a crowd of about 1,000 persons at the celebration he would send 2,000 members of the uniformed Ordnungs Dienst (camp police) to march in an "anti-Red" demonstration called by Mayor Frank Hague in Jersey City tomorrow night.

U. S. Help to Paris, London Predicted

London, June 5 (U.P.).—The London Sunday Times, commenting today on the speech of United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull at Nashville, Tenn., Friday, interpreted it as an indication the hold of "extreme isolationists" over the United States' policies "is not what it was a few years ago."

The Times intimated the Hull speech and "several utterances of President Roosevelt" indicated that while the United States has not indicated it would go to war if France or Great Britain were attacked, it might lend some form of assistance.

G. O. P. to Make Major Issue of Relief Politics

McNary Indicates Attack on Senate Refusal to Curb Funds' Use.

By the Associated Press.

Senator McNary, of Oregon, yesterday indicated Republicans would make the Senate's vote against restricting political activity by relief employes a major issue in this year's Congressional election campaigns.

The Republican leader declared the Democratic majority in the Senate made a "major mistake" when it voted, under the leadership of Administration lieutenants, against writing such restrictions into the $3,723,000,000 lending-spending bill. He added:

"The implication is clear that a portion of these relief funds will be used for political purposes, thereby depriving those in need of relief from a free exercise of their opinions.

Calls Opposition Mistake.

"Every Republican voted for that part of the relief bill providing work relief for the needy, but opposed many of the other provisions which will impose an almost insuperable debt on the Government.

"The major mistake made by the Democrats was their stubborn opposition which brought about the defeat of the Hatch and Austin amendments. These amendments would have prevented the injection of politics into the expenditure of relief funds."

Curbs Narrowly Defeated.

The restrictions on political activities were proposed by Senators Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, and Austin (Republican), of Vermont. Both failed to win approval by narrow margins. The Hatch proposal, which would have required dismissal of any WPA administrative worker who used his influence to interfere in elections, came within a single vote of being passed.

Austin's attempt to make it a criminal offense for relief employes to try to influence elections was rejected 35 to 33.

The fight on the Hatch proposal was led by Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, Democratic leader, who contended it would prevent freedom of expression by WPA workers while leaving State employes "free to go out and electioneer if they want to."

Justice Butler Is Georgetown Prep Speaker

Reminds 20 Graduates of Wider Opportunities They Have Today.

Contrasting limited facilities of the prep school from which he graduated 55 years ago, Justice Pierce Butler, of the United States Supreme Court, told the graduating class at Georgetown Preparatory School yesterday the much finer opportunities afforded them should carry them better equipped into the world.

Hundley Rankin Gover, member of the graduating class, spoke on "The Dawning of a New Era—1788," and Adolfe Arias, jr., on "John Carroll and Catholic Education."

Medals and awards were announced by Father Wiesel as follows:

In the junior division the school medal was won by T. Murray McDonnell.

The William F. Quicksall medal awarded each year to the student who presents the best written examination in three plays of Shakespeare was awarded to Michel M. Healy, with honorable mention to Adolfo Arias, jr.

The Henry Walters Medal for the best original oration on the Constitution of the United States was won by Healy, who also was winner of the Nurre Medal awarded each year to the student who excels in public speaking.

The Class Medal awarded to the boy who has made the best average for the year in three subjects, English, Latin and Greek or history also was won by Healy, who was awarded a gold medal, and the premium for second honors was awarded to Hundley R. Grover, with Edward J. Cummings winning honorable mention.

The premium for the highest average for the year in the trigonometry, was awarded to Hundley R. Grover, with honorable mention to Healy, Edward J. Cummings, jr., D. Jules Titus and Francisco Zayas.

The premium or the highest average in French went to Cummings, with honorable mention to Francisco Zayas.

The premium for the highest average in Spanish was won by Healy, with honorable mention to John E. Fahrendorf.

Premium for the highest average in German went to George H. Sharp, with honorable mention to John E. Eichenlaub and Hundley R. Gover.

The Harvard Club of Washington book award to the outstanding boy of the junior class was awarded to Patrick Sullivan.

The Hamilton Medal, founded by George E. Hamilton, dean of the law school at Georgetown University for the most representative boy who has distinguished himself in his four-year course at the preparatory school by success in his studies and who, by his interest and helpfulness in all school activities, has contributed in a marked degree to the school life of the students, was awarded to Cummings.

Golden scrolls were awarded to John Fahrendorf, editor of the Little Hoya, and to Healy, editor of the Blue and Gray, school papers, in reward for their work on the papers and in recognition of the honors won by the publications from the National Catholic Press Association.

Members of the graduating class were:

Adolfo Arias, jr., of Panama City, Panama; Edward Joseph Cummings, jr., 3228 Klingle road northwest; Thomas Edward Curran, jr., Elmira, N. Y.; Charles Ernest Deschenes, Manchester, N. H.; John Henry Dettweiler, 3545 Quesada street northwest; John Ellis Eichenlaub, 4330 Argyle Terrace northwest; John Edward Fahrendorf, Sioux Falls, S. Dak.; Hundley Rankin Gover, Charlotte, N. C.; Thomas Eugene Graham, Detroit, Mich.; Michel Maurin Healy, 3934 Legation street northwest; Walter Henry Kelly, jr., Amsterdam, N. Mrs. Roosevelt Sees Men of 45 Regaining Jobs Recovery to Aid, First Lady Hopes; Cautions Against Buying on Time.

Solutions for industry's failure to utilize the experience and skill of employes over 45, and criticism of installment buying habits of the Nation were offered yesterday by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in her monthly question-and-answer page in the Democratic Digest.

Replying to a question by Mrs. T. D. Williams, of Charlotte, N. C., on the growing tendency in industry to discharge workers over 45, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"I think the answer to this problem of shortened working years will come in a number of ways. Old age pensions will take a great number of the very much older people out of the working field.

"As business increases, I hope very much that it will organize itself so that people with experience will be able to obtain jobs for which they are fitted. Then they will automatically vacate jobs which require the particular attributes of youth—greater speed, greater strength, and greater adaptability."

Mrs. Roosevelt expressed the view, however, that nobody could say that this problem, brought on by the machine age, was satisfactorily solved as yet.

In response to a question, Mrs. Roosevelt wrote:

"I think in this country we have made a very great mistake in the type of installment buying that so many people have indulged in. Anyone buying on the installment plan should have several things in mind.

"First, they should have enough money to make a down payment which would insure them a good equity in whatever they are buying; then they should be sufficiently sure of a future income during the months when their payments are coming due to make it unlikely that they will be unable to meet their obligation.

"The loss of the equity in whatever they are purchasing is always tragic. Lastly, they should be quite sure that whatever they have bought will still have a value when the final payment has been made. It is sometimes wiser to go without things than to load one's self down with so many installment payments that one has no margin of income for unexpected needs."

Britain Assumes Mediation Role in Turk-French Row

London, June 5 (U.P.).—Great Britain tonight was reported to have undertaken a settlement of Franco-Turkish difficulties in the Alexandretta region of Syria.

The role of mediator was said to have been assumed at the request of the French government following reports that 30,000 Turkish troops were massed across the Syrian border.

It was understood Britain would ask the Turkish government to act "with moderation" in settlement of the Arab-Turk disorders, which arose during registration for a League of Nations plebiscite, scheduled for June 15, on autonomy for the Alexandretta region.

Guillotine Loses; Woman Gets Life

Paris, June 5 (U.P.).—The 50-year-old precedent against the beheading of women—set by French executioners because of the ill-fate which befell men who had carried out such sentences—tonight saved Mme. Josephine Mory from the guillotine.

President Albert Lebrun, refusing to violate the half-century tradition, commuted the death sentence to life imprisonment.

Mme. Mory was convicted of hanging her daughter-in-law.

California-Poland Flight Completed

Warsaw, June 5 (AP).—Maj. Waclaw Makowski and four other Polish fliers landed here this afternoon, from Rome, completing a 16,500-mile flight by a roundabout route from California. A large crowd welcomed them.

The five, flying a twin-engined (Lockheed) American transport plane, left Los Angeles May 13.

Argentina Reports 4th Balanced Budget

Buenos Aires, June 5.—Argentina finished the year 1937 with a surplus of 10,800,000 pesos, according to a report submitted to Congress by the minister of finance, Dr. Pedro Groppo. This was the fourth consecutive year in which the country had maintained a budget equilibrium.

The total expenditures last year, the minister said, were 1,222,900,000 pesos (approximately $407,600,000 at the official rate of exchange) of which 982,200,000 pesos was covered by cash revenue and 240,700,000 pesos with the proceeds of bond issues.

Italian Film Company Offers Garbo $262,500

Rome, June 5 (U.P.).—The Scalera Film Co. announced tonight it had wired Greta Garbo offering her 5,000,000 lire ($262,500) to play the leading role in a film of "international character" with Neopolitan and Venetian backgrounds.

It was understood Marlene Dietrich refused a $78,750 offer of the film company to appear in an Italian motion picture.

Regimentation Called Assassin Of U. S. Liberty

Dr. Gray Warns American U. Students Democracy Is in Danger.

An attack on "the blundering confusion of what passes for social reconstruction" marked the baccalaureate address delivered yesterday by Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor of the American University.

The "increasing wreckage of national character" was termed by Dr. Gray "the assassination of democracy." Planned economy, the chancellor said, "has a noble sound, until you realize that when you plan consumption you must plan the consumer also."

"If Government prescribes the bushels of wheat to be raised it must regiment the number of people who will eat that wheat in preference to corn or rice. To the extent that it can do that it ceases to be democracy, no matter how eloquently it repeats the name."

"Democracy is standing on your doorstep with its life in your hands," Dr. Gray told the university's graduating class, at Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church. "There's the great cause that depends on you. Men were fighting for it in Cromwell's England, and in revolutionary France and again and again in the German states. They fought for it here—and haven't we honored them! But they did not fight a harder battle than you may have to fight."

Dr. Gray stated that "today the tides of democratic purposes are running out, have run clear out in Germany and Italy and Russia and are ebbing fast and fatally in Spain; are ebbing somewhat here, as well, so that democracy is on the defensive wherever it still holds the field." He warned that "the more effectively democracy prepares to defend itself, the farther it travels from being democracy."

Following Dr. Gray's address, a university tea was held in the women's residence.

Dr. Pruden Talks To Columbia Class

Roman persecution of the Christians was compared to current German attitude toward Christianity by Dr. Edward H. Pruden in a commencement address delivered yesterday to students of the Columbia College of Christian Education.

Speaking at First Baptist Church, of which he is pastor, Dr. Pruden congratulated the students on their readiness to preach the gospel in their daily lives.

Miss Elsie Wade Stone, president of the college, awarded certificates to nearly 50 students. Following the exercises, the students presented a gift to Miss Stone at a reception in the college building, 1708 Massachusetts avenue.

Father Coronas, Scientist, Is Dead

Manila, June 5 (AP).—Father Jose Coronas, 67, internationally known scientist missionary, died today in a hospital where he underwent an appendectomy ten days ago.

Father Coronas, born in Barcelona, Spain, received part of his education in St. Louis, Mo., where he was ordained at St. Louis Cathedral in 1904.

He worked in the United States Wather Bureau at Washington, D. C., where he was recognized as an expert on weather mapping. He also was widely known for his writings on meteorology and seismology.

Father Coronas was a member of the Jesuit order for 50 years.

Choice of Work Human Right, Howard Hears

Dr. Johnson Tells Class Graduates Must Fight for Peace.

Today's graduates must fight for a world in which peace, security and individual choice of a life's work are assured, Dr Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University, said at baccalaureate exercises yesterday. More than 4,000 persons attended.

To graduates "about to participate in an organized system of life, who have prepared to do a highly specialized service to American people," he said it was futile to consider the present world situation as temporary. "We are living," he said, "in a way inconsistent with the laws of the universe, and there is no likelihood that we shall be brought back to a normalcy soon.

"The economic dislocation we are now suffering affects every country. The most helpful sign, in development of our intellectual instrumentalities, is the realization that we have come to the end of an era. This is a dangerous time in any country, especially for minorities. The struggle of two systems of thought on the continent is taking place here also.

In Realm of Power.

"If there is any movement that deserves support, it is that of an understanding between Jews and Christians. But if Jews and Christians are unconcerned about the welfare of the human spirit in darker skin, it is an illusion for them to feel that by concentrating on themselves alone, they can escape the world condition of today.

"Forces against which minorities are contending are not in the realm of thought, but in the realm of power. Liberalism is in its most dangerous position because it is up against a world that will not yield to essays and philosophy, but only to a profound and concerted effort to attack it at its root. The approach of you, as graduates, to a solution is through an understanding of the world, and by thinking world thoughts, even beyond the international framework.

"The weakness of democracy today is not in comparison of armies and air forces with those of other nations, but in its soul, which stands abashed before Germany, Italy and Japan and lesser nations, because democracy has demonstrated its contempt for the doctrines which it preaches. While enunciating the doctrine of respect for human life, it has subordinated and exploited human life here and in the Far East for more than a century. It is the duty of the educated Negro to give to your country this truth, because you love it and wish it to come out of this era with clean hands.

Asks Economic Security.

"A society that is supposed to be based on Christian love that does not share its economic security has no worth-while basis. Communism is the host of a truncated Christianity, dogging her steps because she has given up her mission on earth, and has not insisted on the common sharing of the securities of life.

"Twelve million Negroes and 10,000,000 whites in the South have never been secure in possession of their homes and the instruments of production. More than 600,000 peoples of China, India and Africa for ages have been pawns of the economically industrialized nations of the world. We must seek a world in which the security shared by a small percentage of the people will be shared by all.

"We must seek a society in which working shall be by occupational choice. Work has been degraded by nations of the Western World into an instrumentality by which money is secured. It should be a thing of art calling for the highest human endeavor. The foundation of society is not economics, but a thing of the spirit. As graduates you will associate yourselves with those who wish to give human life a shared security, and you will not willingly be the tools of those who are unwilling to share that security which they possess."

Others participating in the exercises were the Rev. Ellis A. Christian, Dr. Earl L. Harrison and the Rev. Halley B. Taylor.

Samuel Schell in Race For Lewis House Seat

Samuel Duvall Schell, of Frederick, Md., assistant to E. S. Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, has entered the race for the House seat to be vacated by Representative David J. Lewis.

Lewis, who represents the Sixth Maryland District in Congress, has announced his candidacy for the Senate seat of Millard E. Tydings.

Schell, a friend of both Lewis and Tydings, has long been active in Maryland Democratic politics, but has never before sought an elective office.

Boy Is Believed Drowned; 7 Are Missing Here

Arlington Child Had Been Fishing in Potomac With Brother and Sister.

Seven children, one of whom is believed to have drowned in the Potomac River, yesterday were reported missing in the Washington area.

Nine-year-old Raymond Miller, 2501 Military road, Arlington, was believed to have fallen in the river while fishing about a mile and a half below Chain Bridge road. He had been fishing with his brother James, 11, and sister Mary, 12, who went home earlier.

When the child failed to appear for supper, his father, Michael Miller, notified police, who immediately started a search. The boy was wearing overalls, with no shirt, and was barefooted.

Also reported missing was Billy Powell, 16, who disappeared June 2 from his home at 1916 North Wayne street, Arlington. He was dressed in a dark blue suit, felt hat and bluish-gray macinaw.

Nathaniel Jones, 11, colored, described as 3 feet tall and weighing 69 pounds, has been missing since June 2, when he left his home at 4915 Virginia avenue southeast for school.

Two girls, Agnes Loukota, 16, and Ruby Clayton, 14, disappeared from their home at 401 Fourth street northwest about 10 p. m. Saturday night. Police were informed by parents that the girls might be accompanied by two youths and traveling in a car.

Cathedral Seniors Hear Dr. Freeman

The 13 seniors, in white mortarboard caps and white dresses, marched into the cathedral with the other students, Miss Mabel B. Turner, principal, and four members of the cathedral clergy, including Bishop Freeman, his chaplain, Canon Raymond L. Wolven; Canon Anson Phelps Stokes and Canon Edward S. Dunlap.

Woman Hurt in Fall.

Annie Sutton, colored, 41, of 41 Massachusetts avenue northwest, suffered head and leg injuries when she jumped or fell from an automobile crossing Highway Bridge early last night. She was taken to Emergency Hospital by Samuel Smith, colored, 30, of Arlington, Va., with whom she was riding, and later transferred to Gallinger Hospital. Smith was held for investigation.

Slump Blamed On 'Enervation' Of U. S. Morals

Bishop Freeman Delivers Baccalaureate Sermon to G. W. Class.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, last night told members of the graduating class at George Washington University the primary cause of the depression has been "the moral enervation of the American people," not industrial dislocation.

Bishop Freeman, delivering the baccalaureate sermon in ceremonies at the Washington Cathedral, declared morality and religion were the only sure props of the State. He advised his hearers never to forget that the American Government, in character and principle, is based on Christianity.

Pleading for dispassionate judgment in facing the problems of today, Bishop Freeman said in times of crisis "it is not the mob, but a few choice and courageous spirits who determine the wise course of action."

"The only hope in the world lies in the men and women with the capacity and the will to think clearly irrespective of a confused public opinion," he stated.

Bishop Freeman said much legislation in recent years had departed from "well tested and time-honored ideals." The confusion of the present, he told the graduating class, "has given you an opportunity for service, the like of which my generaton has never known."

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, read the lesson. Members of the George Washington Glee Club led the musical part of the service.

Sky 'Saharas' BelievedOrigin Of Cosmic Ray

Millikan Suggests Matter Ceases in Vast Barrens Beyond the Stars.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 5.—A new theory which says there are great deserts in the sky where matter shrivels up and blows away was formulated today by a world-famous scientist to explain the mystery of cosmic rays.

It is these arid stretches of the universe, suggests Dr. Robert A. Millikan, of the California Institute of Technology, which give birth to the strange electrical bullets that bombard the earth.

The "sky deserts" lie beyond the stars, according to this concept. They are so barren, little if anything lives there.

Rays Scatter.

On them, Dr. Millikan believes, matter shrivels up in complete annihilation, just as men and animals sometimes shrivel on the deserts of the earth. But whereas on earth bleached bones remain to tell the story, in the sky deserts only the cosmic rays are left, and they fly off in all directions.

From this far-off birthplace the mysterious particles come crashing into the solar system like long-range shells, banging into atoms en route and bashing them to bits.

Dr. Millikan's theory, based on experiments he recently completed with two research associates, Dr. I. S. Bowen and Dr. H. Victor Neher, is in keeping with one of Albert Einstein's famous equations governing transformatoin of matter into energy.

Mystery an Old One.

It was suggested years ago such transformaton might produce cosmic radiation through the annihilation of atoms. Dr. Millikan now supports this view and adds the transformation must take place in regions where little matter exists. These regions would be the "deserts of the sky."

If Dr. Millikan is correct, he has solved a puzzle he and other cosmic ray students all over the world have been baffled by since the mysterious radiation was first observed. It had been established the rays came from somewhere outside earth's atmosphere, but "where" was a moot point. Some thought the sun responsible. Others said the rays came from disintegration of matter between the stars. Wherever they originated, they came in all directions.

GROWING TOBACCO AS I DO—I'VE LEARNED FROM PERSONAL EXPERIENCE THAT CAMEL BUYS FINER TOBACCOS. MANY'S THE TIME THEY'VE PAID ME MORE TO GET MY FINEST LOTS. MOST OF US PLANTERS PREFER CAMELS. I'VE BEEN A STEADY CAMEL SMOKER FOR 8 YEARS NOW, AND I'LL SAY CAMEL'S CHOICE TOBACCOS SURE MAKE A LOT OF DIFFERENCE IN SMOKING
CAMEL
CECIL CLAYBOURNE, who knows tobacco quality as only a grower can
THERE surely is a big difference between Camels and other cigarettes—a lot more real smoking enjoyment—when men like Mr. Claybourne, who know tobacco because they grow it, say: "Most of us planters are steady Camel smokers." He gives you a convincing explanation of the difference—CAMEL'S FINER, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS.

Danville Opens Biggest Project East of TVA

Howard A. Gray Will Speak Tomorrow at Dedication in Virginia.

The largest public power project east of the TVA will be dedicated tomorrow when Assistant PWA Administrator Howard A. Gray speaks at the site of the $3,405,400 Pinnacles hydro-electric development, financed by Danville, Va., and the PWA.

Situated 65 miles west of Danville in Patrick County, the project is strung along 7 miles of the rugged Dan valley in a 9,000-acre area which the city has purchased.

For two years the valley has echoed the thud of dynamite, the grinding of Army trucks laboring over tortuous mountain trails, and the rattle of drills boring through granite.

Today Point Lookout Dam rises 140 feet from a deep gorge in the Dan, 2,112 feet above sea level. In the diversion reservoir behind the barrier, covering 40 acres, 60,000,000 cubic feet of water will be stored.

Backs Up River 20 Miles.

Six miles up stream from Point Lookout at the 2,480-foot level, Big Bend Dam is taking form. When completed this fall, it will back up the river 20 miles, impounding 350,000,000 cubic feet.

Water released from the storage reservoir behind the Big Bend Dam will be sprayed through a giant nozzle to the stream below. The fountain arrangement was adopted in preference to the usual valve house and discharge pipe because the water thundering down in a concentrated stream, would scour the river bed and sweep debris against the lower dam.

At Point Lookout water is led through a 6-foot pipe nearly 2 miles, half the distance in tunnels, to the surge tank, where the momentum of the racing gallons is reduced before the final plunge.

Biggest Head in East.

Down steel penstocks, the water drops 600 feet—while traveling only twice that distance horizontally—to three hydraulic turbines connected to three generators, creating the highest head of power anywhere east of the Rockies.

Developing 300 pounds of pressure to the square inch, a jet of water 6 inches in diameter will strike the impulse blades of the turbines, spinning flywheels that weigh 20 tons.

A transformer will send out 66,000 volts over a high-tension line to Danville, where it will be stepped down to 2,300 volts for city consumption. The project will have an annual output of 30,000,000 kilowatt hours, 50 per cent greater than the city's present consumption.

Built in 1912 to replace the original plant structure erected in 1885, the Danville plant is the oldest municipally owned utility in the country.

The present project was financed by a $1,529,954 grant from the PWA, the balance being raised by the city through bond issues.

The development has given employment to 400 men who have been housed in a camp equipped with materials furnished by a CCC camp.

Two Cuban Party Leaders Clash in Duel; Both Hurt

Havana, June 5 (AP).—Ruben de Leon, secretary of the Cuban Revolutionary Party and director of the daily newspaper Patria, was disabled by two sword thrusts in his right arm in a duel at dawn today with Senator Ramon Vasconcelos, president of the Liberal Party. Physicians halted the encounter after the blades clashed three times.

Vasconcelos, who suffered wounds in the right arm and chest, shook hands with de Leon at the conclusion of the affair and agreed to forget the differences which had caused the duel. The senator had made certain comments in the newspaper El Pais, resulting in the challenge from de Leon.

When de Leon recovers from his wounds, he will duel with Octavio Garceran, nephew of President Laredo Bru, who challenged him because of an article in yesterday's edition of Patria.

Icebreakers Save Three Soviet Ships

Moscow, June 5 (AP).—Soviet icebreakers reported today they had reached the first of a score of ships frozen fast in Arctic ice all winter.

The icebreaker Yermak radioed she had led acther icebreaker, the Rusanoff, and two other ships out of the ice into open waters. The ships had been stuck near Franz Josef Land, farthest north of the Soviet's outposts.

Additional icebreakers are due to sail this month to aid the stranded ships, aboard which some 600 persons have passed the winter.

Foreign Rotarians Relax After Sightseeing Tour country when the civil war ends.

Insurgents said there had been other "brushes" between Italians and Spaniards in other insurgent cities.

Franco and his officers were understood to have agreed "cooperation" between the insurgents and Italy would not be decreased by the incidents, but they decided to do their utmost to prevent their recurrence in the future.

City Reported Abandoned.

Hendaye, France, June 5 (U.P.).—Insurgent headquarters at Zaragoza reported tonight the loyalist city of Albocacer, last stumbling block to Gen. Franco's drive on Castellon de la Plana along the Mediterranean, had been "completely abandoned" under threat of encirclement.

The loyalists, after holding out for six weeks in the fortified town at the Eastern end of the Teruel-Mediterranean front, were said to have fled to the surrounding mountain heights.

There was only scattered activity in other sectors of the southern front, although insurgent Navarrese troops, striking cross-country toward Sagunto on the coast from the direction of Teruel, drove from Penagolosa toward the important railroad line running from Mora de Rubielos to Castellon de la Plana.

Further south, in the direct drive on Castellon de la Plana, the insurgents reported the capture of 300 loyalists and large quantities of war materials.

Soviet Production Far Behind U. S., Survey Discloses

By the Associated Press.

The Foreign Policy Association yesterday reported the Soviet Union was yet far from attaining the production levels of the United States. The association published a survey prepared by Vera Micheles Dean, its research director.

Although the communistic state has not yet achieved American production levels nor the average living standards of Western countries, the report said, its output of some industrial products like steel and pig iron compares favorably with that of Germany.

"This economic development has been achieved at heavy sacrifices in terms of individual life and liberty," the report revealed.

Much of the hardships endured by the Russian people might have been avoided, the survey said, had Soviet authorities not felt impelled to accomplish industrial development swiftly, before the country could be attacked by hostile powers.

Bullitt Calls on Freud, in Paris En Route to England

Paris, June 5 (AP).—Bearded Dr. Sigmund Freud, happy to have left Nazified Vienna where he pioneered in studies of the influence of sex on behaviour, departed tonight for England "to peace, study and work."

The world-famed founder of psychoanalysis spent only a few hours in Paris resting for the remainder of his journey.

United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt was one of the first to climb aboard the Orient Express to welcome the 82-year-old Jewish scientist. With Freud were his wife and daughter, Anna.

Iowa

ator who complied with every request for labor legislation?" Green asked in a message to A. A. Couch, Iowa federation president. "Such action would be the height of ingratitude."

An anti-court plan Democrat, Gillette, has four opponents. They are Representative Otha D. Wearin, claiming White House support and called "my friend" in a telegram from James Roosevelt, the President's son; J. J. Meyers, Mrs. Ellsworth Richardson and W. G. Byerhoff.

An Older Partisan.

The last three, as well as Wearin, are running on platforms of unqualified support of the New Deal. Mrs. Richardson, former State farm bureau official, is the first woman major party senatorial candidate in history to be listed on an Iowa ballot.

Wearin has the outright indorsement of WPA Chief Harry L. Hopkins and United Automobile Workers Union President Homer Martin. The Congressman has circulated copies of his photograph taken with James Roosevelt as evidence of Presidential support for his cause.

In his "fireside" radio speech delivered from his Cherokee home, Gillette castigated Wearin's outside supporters as "this pack of political wolves from all over the United States."

The Senator declared he was "fighting for fundamental democracy long years before such men as Homer Martin and Harry Hopkins had aligned themselves with our party, when it had finally reached a position of dominance and control."

He referred to his support of such Administration measures as the reorganization bill, the 1938 AAA, the Guffey coal act, the public utilities holding company act and the social security act. He added, however, that he had not been a "yes" man and listed the Supreme Court reform measure, the NRA and the "first draft of the 1933 AAA as proposals he refused to support.

Opposed Court Plan.

Gillette said he visited President Roosevelt immediately after introduction of the proposal to give the Executive Department authority to make additions to the Supreme Court.

"I informed him that despite my feeling of most intense loyalty to him personally and to the Administration, I could not vote to give the Executive Department such control over the judicial branch," he declared.

"I considered such a proposal fraught with the utmost danger to minorities in our country."

The Senator termed his stand "the crime I have committed."

Besides the "wrath of such men as Harry Hopkins and Homer Martin," he added, his attitude was criticized by Earl Browder, Communist Party leader; Jay Franklin, newspaper columnist, and others.

"Dishonest Campaign."

The candidate expressed resentment at what he termed the "deliberate, cunningly conceived and thoroughly dishonest campaign that has been conducted with the approval of this one candidate, Mr. Wearin, by those outside the State of Iowa, who have attempted to intrude themselves into our State affairs and who are speaking for themselves alone."

Gillette reiterated that he had been assured "and reassured" that the President, the Administration leadership in the Senate, National Committee Chairman Farley and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace had maintained a position of "proper and strict neutrality" in the contest.

With the alignment within the State largely a mobilization of the Democratic State machine forces for Gillette against less well-defined Federal agencies' support for Wearin, both sides are looking to tomorrow's farm vote as a possible determining factor in the final outcome.

A large rural primary turnout is expected, no matter what the weather.

This is an "in-between" time of the year in rural Iowa. Practically all the corn is planted, little of it is up or in need of plowing, and the haying and harvest seasons are not due until later this month and early in July.

The Democratic internal strife has detracted from public interest in the Republican senatorial contest between former Senator L. J. Dickinson and Representative Lloyd Thurston. Dicknison, unrelenting foe of the New Deal, served six terms as a Representative and one as Senator. Thurston has been elected to seven consecutive terms in the House.

La Follette Hits Rail Debts.

Boston, June 5 (U.P.).—Gov. Philip La Follette tonight indicated his New England visit was not prompted by a desire to gain the support of Gov. George D. Aiken, Vermont Republican, in his Progressive Party movement.

After a closed meeting with 100 Massachusetts politicians here in which he outlined the Progressive Party's aims, the Wisconsin Governor hinted Aiken's support would be welcomed. He said, however, that he never had discussed such an alignment with Aiken, proponent of a "purge of reactionaries" from the Republican Party "even if a new organization is necessary."

La Follette explained that the Progressives were working on the theory that "no civilized nation has ever existed or can exist that cannot first provide its men and women an opportunity for wealth-creating work."

family when he left his home at Asch, in Bohemia, and it was reported he was en route either to Berlin or Berchtesgaden.

Tomorrow's demonstration, which is expected to rival the Slovak rally in numbers, will be held in connection with the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Czechoslovak republic.

Slovakia, along the western Carpathian Mountains and inhabited by people who occupied the region in the fifth century, comprises more than one-third of all Czechoslovakia.

Father Hlinka, whose autonomy program was supported at today's demonstration by American delegates who waved the text of a "treaty of rights" signed 20 years ago this month in the United States, said he supported the Czechoslovak republic, but if integral autonomy was not forthcoming for the 2,300,000 Slovaks, they would "be forced to arrange to leave."

"In this event," said the Slovak leader, "it would not matter whether we became a part of Germany or Poland, just as long as we have integral autonomy."

He was asked whether the Slovaks would fight for Czechoslovakia if war broke out.

"Ask the soldiers," he replied.

Sends Thanks to Duce.

The veteran leader of the Slovak People's Party, a gaunt and weary-appearing man with long white hair, said he regarded today's demonstration of support for his autonomy proposal as a plebiscite on the issue.

He said he "regretted" there were Jews in Slovakia (2.4 per cent by the last census), but wanted them to have the same justice as the Slovaks.

To an Italian journalist, he said:

"Thank Premier Benito Mussolini for me for having brought Catholicism to Ethiopia."

Father Hlinka was asked whether the anti-Communist stand of the Slovak People's Party could be interpreted as opposition to Czechoslovakia's military alliance with Soviet Russia.

"We are against Marxism and Communism," he said, "but I do not think it will be necessary to denounce this treaty because Communist Russia probably will collapse.

"However, if we ever get into power, we certainly would denounce this treaty."

Father Hlinka nearly collapsed today during his speech to his 100,000 followers in Bratislava, capital of Slovakia. He said he was grateful for the moral support extended to the Slovaks by the militant Sudeten German Minority under Konrad Henlein.

"I consider the public acclaim today for our autonomy program to be a virtual plebiscite in which the Slovaks voiced their will," Father Hlinka said.

"In another sense it was more than a plebiscite for there was no pressure on the people.

"We are first of all for Czechoslovakia and the republic and we want to remain part of it, but we must insist on integral autonomy based on the Pittsburgh Treaty of June 30, 1918, in which Czechs and Slovaks in the United States agreed on "cultural self-government" for the Slovaks of this country.

"If we cannot have this right then we must say good-by to Czechoslovakia. If we do not obtain our rights in this respect—autonomy—we will be debased to the position of a minority and as a minority would have to appeal to Europe.

"It must be remembered, however, that we are not seeking independence but only recognition of our autonomy rights."

The American delegates to today's mass meeting, representing 1,000,000 Slovaks in the United States, brought with them the original Pittsburgh Treaty and were wildly cheered.

Daladier Hints Anglo-U.S. Aid Against 'Force'

France 'Not Isolated' in Fight for Justice, Premier Declares.

By the Associated Press.

Lyon, France, June 5.—Premier Edouard Daladier warned the world today France was "not isolated" in her determination to prevent "force from becoming the judge of all human relations."

He spoke before a large crowd at the inauguration of a monument honoring those who died in the French health service during the World War.

"We have already overcome many obstacles and will meet many more on our road," he said, "but we can conquer them if we remain united."

"We Aren't Isolated."

"We count on the moderation, spirit, and conciliation of the people to solve the present difficulties," he said.

"We also count on our strength to spare Europe from recourse to violence."

"We aren't isolated to carry out this task," Daladier asserted, as he concluded with what was considered an open reference to Great Britain's support and recent statements by United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Sumner Welles:

"Other nations are animated with the same resolve. They just gave us a moving and striking demonstration of it only a few days ago."

Use of Force Flayed.

(Last Friday, Secretary of State Hull in an address at Nashville, Tenn., denounced the use of force as an instrument of policy and called for united backing of a program to restore the principles of "order under law" in the world.

(On the same day, Acting Secretary of State Welles in Washington made public the American Government's condemnation of aerial bombings of civilians in Spain and China.)

Representatives of most embassies and legations were seated on the platform with Edouard Herriot, president of the Chamber of Deputies, who acted as host in his capacity as mayor of Lyon.

Among them was Lieut. Col. Horace H. Fuller, military attache at the United States embassy in Paris.

carried out, it was expected it would be the "last-ditch" stand of the central armies.

Chinese reports said Japanese bombing planes already were roving over the areas east of here, attacking Nanling and Fancheng, in southern Anhwei Province, and over 200 bombs were dropped on Tatung while Japanese gunboats lined up in the Yangtze Rive and shelled the town.

Japanese Escape Trap.

Meanwhile the Japanese army of Lieut. Gen. Kenji Doihara, which had been surrounded by Chinese forces and threatened with annihilation last week, had cut their way through the trap, according to Japanese reports, and reoccupied Lanfeng.

Chinese reports from military headquarters in the north said the Japanese had forced a "flying column" through their lines and reached the outskirts of the town of Chenliu, 12 miles southeast of Kaifeng, where the Chinese had planned to make their great stand in defense of Chengchow, the junction point of the East-West Lunghai Railroad and the North-South Peiping-Hankow line.

The Chinese source said the "flying column" had smashed through Chinese defenses at Chenliu, and, without occupying the town, was pushing westward toward Kaifeng.

Drive on Railroad.

Another Japanese column which had been driving westward through Pohsien, the Chinese outposts defending the Peiping-Hankow tracks south of Chengchow, crossed the main highway running southeast from Chengchow and was within 80 miles of the railroad. Severance of the railroad would cut the main line of communication north of Hankow.

A Japanese naval party landed at the town of Hoyue, where a Chinese force met them in a savage counter-attack, killing 60 Japanese seamen, according to Chinese reports, and driving the landing party back to the gunboats.

Meanwhile Japanese planes ranged as far south as the Fukien border, dropping 60 bombs on Yushan in Kiangsi Province. More than 30 bombs were unloaded at Pucheng, in northern Fukien Province, in an effort to destroy an airdrome, which the Chinese said escaped damage.

Three Japanese planes roared over Chengyangkwan, in northern Anhwei, dropping 10 bombs, killing 30 civilians and destroying about 60 houses. Scores of civilians also were killed near Nishui, in southern Chekiang Province.

Chinese Students Learn the Art of Hit-and-Run Warfare

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

In Shensi Province, near Yenanfu, the camera catches young Chinese students of one of the anti-Japanese "universities" learning the art of hit-and-run warfare which China hopes eventually will destroy the invader. Trained by officers of China's famed Red Eighth Army, they work behind the Japanese lines, claim they've wiped out many a garrison with guerrilla tactics. In the background may be seen the caves which the "students of war" use as barracks.

pounded the city steadily until 1 p. m.

A 500-pound bomb fell at the gate of Sun Yat Sen University, making a crater 30 feet deep and 45 feet across.

A smaller one struck a dugout on the campus, killing six students.

One woman, buried under 15 feet of debris, was removed alive after four hours.

Fifty houses were wrecked in one area.

First-aid workers still were combing ruins in search of victims of yesterday's attacks when today's air raids began. They had worked with gas lamps and torches during the night. Damage to mains had cut off the current for electric lights.

Rescue squads were unable to cope with the masses of fallen masonry, and hundreds were believed to have died during the night beneath the ruins.

100 Yards of Corpses.

A weeping boy was seen giving a drink to his mother, who was pinned under a huge block of stone.

In yesterday's destruction, a four-story concrete structure at the corner of Winghong and Taihong roads was demolished, burying hundreds of persons.

Two bombs fell near the Pearl River Bridge, destroying waterfront houses. Five were dropped in the Saichuen power house compound, but the plant was undamaged.

Canton's streets last night were packed with civilians trying to get away.

Hospitals were overflowing and refugee and relief workers were forced to care for the able-bodied as well as the injured.

Hongkong itself has become increasingly congested, and many persons sleep in the streets.

Chinese continue to enter, although the authorities require each to have $20. This restriction prevents thousands from leaving Canton, where huge crowds wait hopelessly around the railway stations and wharves.

Peer Demands Hongkong.

Tokyo, June 5 (AP).—A demand for Japanese control of the British crown colony of Hongkong voiced today by Motojiro Sugiyama, member of Japan's House of Peers, was reported in Domei (Japanese news agency) dispatches from Nagasaki.

Sugiyama's declaration, "Japan must control Hongkong" was made as he ended a month's visit to the colony, center of Britain's extensive China trade.

He said he would urge Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye's cabinet to take measures toward "controlling Hongkong as quickly as possible both militarily and diplomatically," the agency said.

Kansas Flood Now Imperils Abilene

Salina, Kans., June 5 (AP).—Two square miles of Salina's east side were under water from the flooding Smoky Hill River tonight but citizens had one consolation—the flood crest had passed.

Tonight the spreading Smoky Hill, joined by the Saline River, was bearing down on Abilene and Enterprise. Crop damage was expected to run well above that of the heavy 1935 floods because crops this year were much better.

area and also telegraphed to Daladier, announcing his intention to question the government on "measures the government intends to take to end these incidents which are such a grave threat to peace."

Villagers Flee.

The roaring motors of the bombing squadron brought villagers and peasants in and around Orlu and nearby Orgeix to the windows and doorways of their homes in curiosity.

But a few moments later—about 8:30 a. m.—when bombs started falling, they tumbled terrified into cellars and other places of safety.

When the raiders had retired the residents of Orlu and Orgeix told police the nine planes had approached in three "V" formations of three planes each, heading north. That was at 8:15 a. m.

A few minutes later the squadron wheeled about, dived to an altitude of about 2,000 feet and dropped the bombs. Then, climbing for altitude, the planes vanished toward the Spanish border near Andorra.

Local authorities reported tracks of the Trans-Pyrenees Railroad were intact and that trains could pass. Mobile guardsmen were checking the damage and telegraphing reports to Paris.

Rebels Kill Four Britons.

Barcelona, June 5 (AP).—An official communique disclosed today four members of the crew of the British tanker Maryad, bombed by an insurgent seaplane near Alicante, had been killed.

The attack took place early yesterday.

The government announced two German-type bombing planes were brought down in two raids on Barcelona yesterday.

Five persons were killed and four injured in the second raid, none in the first.

Bei Jersey-am-Hudson.

To judge from the reception given Norman Thomas in Newark, a new commonwealth of "Grossjerseycity" has been established across the Hudson from New York. At least Newark gave the prominent Socialist—and former Presbyterian minister—very much the same totalitarian treatment he experienced in an earlier attempt to make a public address in Jersey City.

Indeed, the Newark police even outdid Mayor Hague's men for undemocratic behavior. In Jersey City, Mr. Thomas had no permit to speak; in Newark he had. Notwithstanding, the police gave him little assistance in maintaining his citizen's rights. On the contrary, they appear even to have cleared a way through the crowd for a brass band to drown out all speaking, and for hoodlums to pelt the speaker with rotten eggs and ripe tomatoes. The impropriety of this is made doubly clear by the word of a Newark official that the band and its followers had no permit to parade. The same official also seconded Mr. Thomas' allegation that his antagonizers were not all members of the veteran and labor organizations they purported to be. In a protest addressed later to the Mayor of Newark, he characterized them as "bums and drunks"; the official referred to them as a "bunch of hoodlums." Evidently Johnson's saw will have to be revised to read that "patriotism is the first refuge of a scoundrel."

In any event, the charge will bear investigation by the leaders of the veteran and labor groups involved. And, if sustained, repudiation in line with their frequent declarations for "Americanism" will be expected as promptly as an apology from New Jersey and Newark authorities for what was clearly one of the most disgraceful exhibitions of mistaken patriotism recently recorded.

Danger Signals For Youth.

As every Marylander knows, he lives, from a sociological viewpoint, in the typical American State. The rolling farmland and wooded areas of its northern parts correspond to the Central and Midwestern States; in such counties as Calvert, a close approximation to life in the South is found; the Blue Ridge range adds a hill country flavor; the bay counties give a maritime taste; finally, there are industrial cities and residential suburbs, which last Washington knows best.

Accordingly, Maryland was selected by the American Youth Commission of the American Council on Education as an area in which to study the life of young people between the ages of 16 and 24. Some 13,500 youths, ranging from debutantes to relief applicants, were approached by trained interviewers. The sum of their comments, just published, makes a provoking document. Certain of the conclusions are graphically displayed in the current issue of Life. Startling in their generally unhappy tone, they refute Westbrook Pegler, who recently argued that adults have no business prying into youngsters' affairs.

A positive correlation between parents' income and children's education is one of the most significant findings of the survey. Taken in conjunction with the known inverse ratio of birth rates to wealth, it points a sharp warning that the Nation's vaunted educational system is not effectively serving the needs of democracy. Secondary education, apparently, is becoming reserved for a diminishing minority and class lines loom ominously across the future.

Similar arresting warnings are also expressed in connection with youth's social and vocational problems. Because of lack of jobs, leisure time is no longer a luxury for youth. This fact presents a new challenge to educators as well as to communities with a sense of obligation toward the rising generation. By the same token, the need for broader vocational guidance and training is sharply emphasized.

In the main, these points have been commonly conceded. The value of the AYC survey is that it makes positive and precise the extent of the difficulties confronting young people today. In one important particular, too, the survey makes a new and highly significant contribution. Having a broad rather than any specific focus on the youths approached, the AYC was able to give a picture of their general morale and spirit. And it is a far from pretty picture. "A supine meekness" was the general finding.

If, as statistical experts testify, the 13,500 youths interviewed were a fair cross-section of Maryland's 250,000 boys and girls and if, Maryland being a typical State, these 250,000 reflect the attitude of the 20,000,000 estimated for the entire country, this is disturbing news. In the apt words of the AYC: "In the old a smug conservatism may be a menace, but in the young a listless apathy can quite easily become a national calamity."

Where The Responsibility Lies.

From the moment President Roosevelt sent his latest spending program to Congress its approval was taken for granted. Spending bills always attract widespread support among legislators, especially on the eve of a political campaign. The overwhelming affirmative votes by which the 1938 pump-priming measure has been approved—60 to 10 in the Senate and 329 to 70 in the House—simply illustrate a well-known weakness of Congress.

For this very reason the President has traditionally served as the guardian of the national credit. In recent years, moreover, budget-making has become the exclusive function of the Executive Branch. Spending plans originate in established governmental agencies. They are co-ordinated and revised by the Budget Bureau under direction of the President, and sent to Congress for approval, modification or rejection. The burden is on Congress to show justification for any expenditure outside of the budget.

It is not by chance that this system has developed over a long period of years. A large measure of executive control over the budget became essential to prevent reckless spending sprees. For members of Congress are inevitably more interested in appropriating funds for the benefit of their constituents than in raising revenue. Projects and grants for their States or districts appear to be specific advantages. On the other hand, the balancing of the budget and maintenance of the Government's credit are national problems which can be evaded with less danger of unfavorable reaction at the polls.

The President and Vice President are the only elected officials who represent the Nation as a whole. Naturally, then, the country looks to the White House for the restraining influence to hold Congressional spending in check. When the President loses that sense of restraint there is virtually no hope of saving the country from an orgy of spending.

In the present instance the Executive initiated the move for another outpouring of Federal money, with little regard for the staggering national debt already incurred. The traditional roles were reversed. Congress attempted to place limitations upon a reckless Administration program. Its failure in that feeble effort should surprise no one.

Most of the responsibility for this gigantic venture in pump-priming, therefore, falls upon the President. Congress has merely acquiesced in the Administration's plan. Moreover, it has left the expenditure of $3,722,000,000 provided in the bill largely to Mr. Roosevelt's discretion. Whatever praise or blame arises out of the venture must be laid chiefly at the White House door.

This does not mean, of course, that Congress should be absolved of responsibility for any experiment in prodigality. That body meekly submitted to a dangerous scheme instead of working out a constructive plan of its own. For that weakness it may be properly censured. But if the country's steady progress toward national bankruptcy is to be halted, the Presidency must reassume its traditional function as guardian of the national credit.

The New I. L. O. Director.

Without a dissenting vote of the governing body, John G. Winant has been elected director of the International Labor Office. He is the first American to occupy that post. This is a real and deserved tribute to the former Governor of New Hampshire and former chairman of the Social Security Board who recently has held the post of assistant director of the I. L. O. It is also a tribute to the importance of American participation in the eminently useful labors of that body.

American membership in the I. L. O. has gone a long way to offset the defection of other nations who no longer find it useful to join in the efforts to improve conditions of labor by international action. For this Nation such efforts have far more than a sentimental and a humanitarian interest. In the long run, as a land whose labor standards are among the highest to be found in the world, we have everything to gain and nothing to lose in helping the I. L. O. achieve its objectives. And the United States and all other nations have an increasing need for the objective and authoritative studies on industrial, economic and sociological problems which the I. L. O. is admirably equipped to make.

As director of the I. L. O. Mr. Winant has a position of great responsibility and great potential usefulness. He has before him the excellent records made by his predecessors, the late Albert Thomas and Harold B. Butler, the retiring head. Mr. Winant's acceptance speech proves that he is fully aware of the implications of his task. In agreeing to take up his new post, he foreswore any idea that he might seek to use his new post as a stepping stone to political advancement at home.

"I realize that in taking on the obligations of this office it is necessary to turn away from many things I had planned to do," he said, "and to have you know that everything in me worth the having is dedicated to the service before me."

In this service Mr. Winant will have a remarkably fine body of international civil servants to aid him. And in E. J. Phelan, of Ireland, the new deputy director, he has an exceptionally able and well-equipped assistant. Together they make a splendid team fully capable of advancing the I. L. O. to an ever increasing measure of usefulness.

Nonintervention At Last?

With the announced purpose of facilitating a general agreement on the interminably discussed Spanish nonintervention issue, Soviet Russia has now waived her objections to the new British proposals for the effective isolation of the conflict in Spain.

These proposals envisage the immediate dispatch of commissions to determine the number of foreigners fighting on both sides. This move would be accompanied by the closing of the French and Portuguese frontiers and the reimposition of the international naval patrol of Spanish waters. The withdrawal from Spain of all foreign "volunteers" would follow in due course.

It is probable that Russia's change of front on this matter was primarily inspired by an unwillingness to take the blame for holding up the execution of a plan which has the support of all other nations represented on the London nonintervention committee. Yet the Moscow government's acceptance of the British proposals is not unconditional. Two important strings are tied to it.

In the first place, Russia, while agreeing to the restoration of land control along the Pyrennean and Portuguese borders, insists that such control should be scrapped if, after a maximum of 40 days, the withdrawal of foreign "volunteers" has not yet begun. Secondly, the Soviet government insists that the restored international naval patrol should be made a more effective instrument of cutting off war supplies to Spain than was the case in the past. Russia demands that official observers named by the London committee should be kept in all Spanish ports where "volunteers" and war supplies might be landed.

There is a real point to these Russian conditions. Nonintervention in the past has been a screen behind which a great deal of interventionist activities have been permitted to take place. The new British plan could have validity only if it operated to bring about the complete isolation of the Spanish conflict by barring entry of war supplies to both sides and by effectively inhibiting the dispatch of any additional "volunteers." Russia's attitude, therefore, puts to the test the sincerity of the other members of the London committee.

In the meantime there has been a revival of talk regarding the possibilities of mediation in Spain, with Great Britain mentioned as the possible mediator. How much validity these rumors have is not clear. But the fact is inescapable that after 23 months the Spanish civil war is far from ended. An immediate victory is out of sight for Franco. It is certainly not less so for the government. And should the British plan loyally and effectively be carried out the present stalemate might indefinitely be prolonged.

Despite the great obstacles to mediation, it is more than a coincidence, therefore, that rumors of a negotiated settlement of the Spanish civil war should coincide with the emergence of a new plan to isolate that ghastly conflict.

Balm Of Hurt Minds.

Sleep, says Sancho Panza, covers a man all over, thoughts and all, like a cloak. It is meat for the hungry, drink for the thirsty, heat for the cold, cold for the hot. And another philosopher, the First Gaoler in Cymbeline, assures us that he that sleeps feels not the toothache.

Small wonder then that all seek it; though some, alas, vainly. The current Reader's Digest gives the plans of some celebrities to woo nature's soft nurse and sweet restorer, and they run from Cecil B. DeMille's phonograph symphonies to Lillian Gish's black eyeshades and wax earplugs; from Frank Craven's imaginary golf to Orson Wells' make-believe that it is 5 o'clock on a winter's morning and that he has to get up.

And there is no reason for all this foolishness. All a person has to do is to go to Danville, Va., and sit on a porch. Why, only the other day a porch sitter slept so soundly that somebody removed his sport shoes and walked off with them.

Oddly enough the sleeper, when he woke at last, notified the police. There is evidence here that even blessings become commonplace. There are many who would be willing to risk losing their shoes for a sleep so sound.

While there's still money left, the Government should have the WPA remove that hill this side of the poorhouse. That's the least it can do for the footsore and weary taxpayer.

The Great God Traffic.

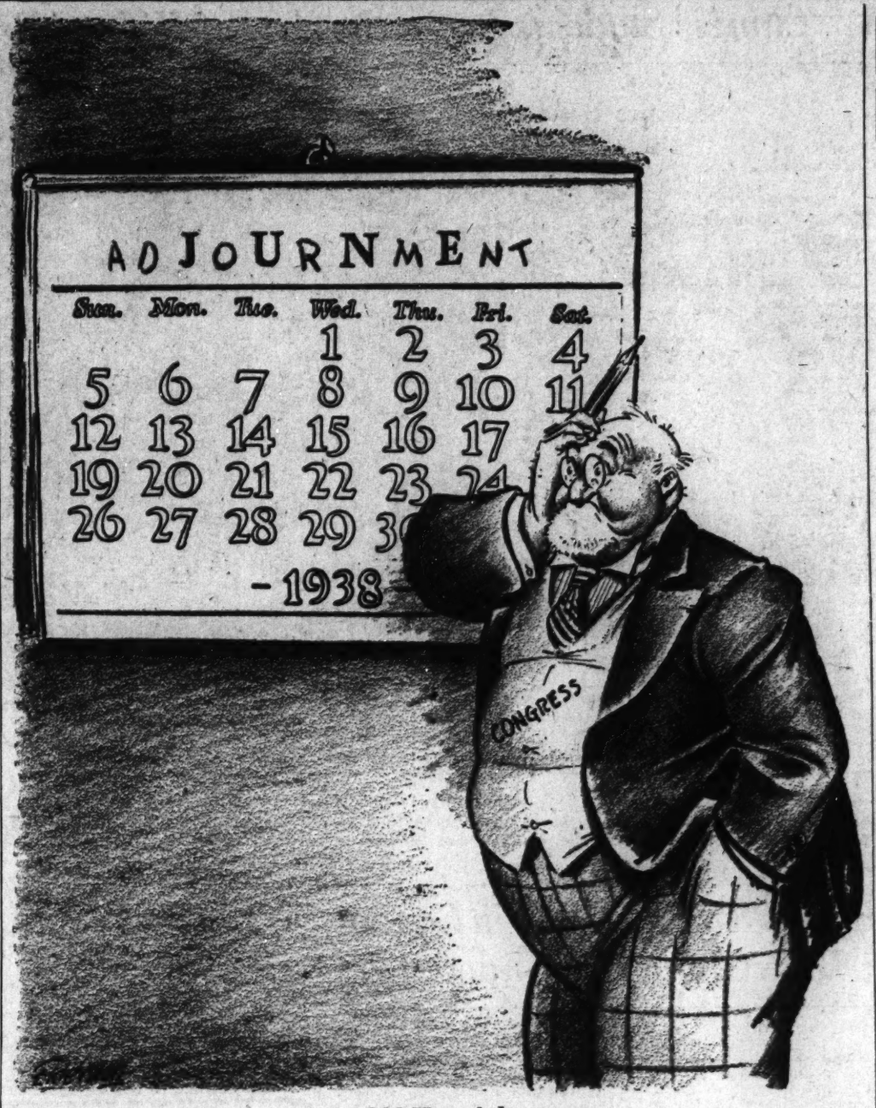
From the Chattanooga News.

An ordinance has been passed in Marietta, Ga., requiring citizens to remove all trees, hedges, shrubs and other things from their yards if they obstruct the view of motorists at street intersections. We suppose it is a good movement. Policemen will cut down the trees and hedges if property owners do not act promptly.

By all means, let nothing obstruct traffic and let nothing stand in the way of the motorist.

We are living in the traffic age, and we must have clear vision at street corners, if beautiful gardens and lawns are ruined to make it so.

We must have four-lane highways and later eight-lane highways and eventually the country will be a flat piece of concrete, marked off in crazy geometrical lines and all the people will be lunatics wearing goggles speeding about hither and yon in their cars and shouting: "Down with everything but traffic!"



Old Hopeful.

A Jefferson Planetarium?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: By all means let's have a planetarium instead of a pile of stone to commemorate Thomas Jefferson. He was one of the bright stars in the firmament of American history and it would be a fitting reminder of a man whose brilliant and scintillating personality made even his slaves look up to him and love him.

And here at the United States Capital, where we have a focus of mundane fights and furore, what could be more helpful than a retreat to which our great leaders could repair and get their bearings occasionally. In the picture of a patterned universe they could be reminded of how small but fixed a part we are of an orderly energy that will probably keep things going long after we have—joined the stars ourselves, we hope.

CLARA LOUISE JOHN.

Cayenne Preferred.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Benjamin Ulmo, a French convict, decided that the penal settlement at Cayenne was more desirable than the modern world. When asked his motive for retiring voluntarily to servitude, he said: "The first is the extraordinary spiritual collapse of the world. The development of the last three or four decades has been strictly along material lines, at the expense of human conscience, intelligence, righteousness and liberty. In the new industrial civilization human beings are simply regimented, mechanized units. It is unendurable for me."

Probably Ulmo had the collapse of our so-called democracy in mind when interviewed. What a sickening travesty on the Thomas Jefferson theory of government when the party in power is permitted to perpetuate itself in office by raiding the Federal Treasury, in order to keep the vote intact. It would certainly seem that when dissenting minority groups are treated with contempt and scorn, which seems to be the case under the Roosevelt regime, and innumerable individuals can be moved about indiscriminately on our political chess board, with the aid of countless dollars, true democracy has vanished.

Ransoms And Kidnaping.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In kidnaping cases one can understand and fully sympathize with the feelings of the parents of the victim, and of their willingness to pay money or do anything to recover their child alive. But in view of the futility of paying ransom in practically every case of the past it would seem that the time has come for the enactment of laws forbidding payment of ransom under heavy penalties.

Money is the object of the criminal, and with that object removed kidnaping would undoubtedly decline, and would only occur, if at all, when the motive was revenge for some real or fancied injury.

It stands to reason that when the kidnaper gets the ransom money he will never return the victim alive for the simple reason that to do so would more readily lead to his discovery and capture.

Unconfined Dogs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with much interest a letter in The Post paper of June 2 concerning dogs in Chevy Chase. I little knew that I was to run up against the matter personally in short order.

Later on that morning I was walking along the street looking for a house number, when, without warning, a big, yellow collie dog jumped at my legs, snapping as he came. He immediately retreated as I started toward him, but he gave me quite a fright at the time. It would have been quite upsetting to an elderly lady or a child. The dog's owners were probably sitting in the house listening to a radio program.

The dog finally went back to the lawn in front of his house and watched me with mean eyes as I proceeded down the street. Another thing about the whole affair was that the dog did very little barking and gave no warning of his approach. If I had been armed with any sort of weapon, there would be one less dog in the world.

I hold no brief either for or against dogs, but I do hold a grudge against owners of dogs who let them run loose to the annoyance and danger of the public at large. Drastic measures of some kind would probably be effective to remedy this situation. Surely people intelligent, or lucky enough to own expensive homes, should be considerate enough to keep their animals where they belong. It is no wonder to me that dog poisoners go to work at intervals, but it is the owners of the dogs that are to blame.

Nominee For Commissioner.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Pleasant Plains Civic Association hereby indorses Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson for the position of Commissioner of the District of Columbia.

Dr. Wilkinson has spent the greater portion of his life within the District of Columbia and is a most worthy product of its schools. He has taught in—and served for many years as principal of—Dunbar High School of this city; and for the past 15 years approximately has held the position of first assistant superintendent of public schools of the District of Columbia.

During the years of his public life Dr. Wilkinson has proved himself meriting the esteem of his fellow citizens, has shown remarkable understanding of the civic needs of our city, and is endowed with an abundance of those distinctly superior qualities demanded of the position for which we heartily urge his appointment.

Favors Present Airport.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to express my views on your leading editorial in The Post of June 3, "Nightmare to Washington." Your common sense analysis of the airport situation certainly appeals to the practical businessman's viewpoint of Washington and the 50,000 people living in Arlington.

In 18 of the largest cities in the United States, there is not one so conveniently located with quick egress and ingress as the one here. The airplane public doesn't want to be landed 9 miles out and pay an extra $2 to taxi in to Washington, as I had to pay recently in one of the great American cities.

The present airport can be enlarged to take care of many years' needs. The old Government experimental farm has served its day and should be used for something more in accordance with present day activities. I have been passing through this old farm for 24 years, from two to six times a day and it makes me laugh to see the wasted effort, time and money spent thereon. Farmers pay little attention to those high-brow reports issued by the Department of Agriculture.

Military road passing through the field has been closed, abolishing any danger from that source. Washington Airport is ideally located from the standpoint of convenience of the traveling public.

Tydings Vs. Lewis In Maryland.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having read the editorial in The Post of June 3 concerning Congressman David J. Lewis, I am constrained to let you know my reaction to it.

First, I want to say that I have been a reader of your paper since August, 1934. I have always read it in order to get as fair a presentation of criticism of the New Deal as is found in most newspapers. The New Deal has few friendly papers, and I believe that of the papers that constantly criticize the present national Administration, yours includes about as much constructive criticism as can be found in the opposition press.

During the campaign of 1936 I felt that your paper was reasonably fair, although you did not hestitate to say that you thought it would be in the best interests of the country for Mr. Roosevelt to be defeated. Any publisher has a right to state his convictions, but there is an obligation upon every reasonable publisher to state the truth about his political opponent. The criticism that you gave of the national Administration during the campaign of 1936 was not always the best, but you at least attempted to be rational and stay away from personal rancor. Your headlines were less misleading than most of the opposition press. I wanted a consistent, intelligent statement of the opposition, and wish to say that this Administration, or any administration, stands to profit by carefully reading and analyzing thoughtful criticism.

I had assumed that your paper would be hostile to the candidacy of Congressman David J. Lewis for the United States Senate. I had thought that since Senator Tydings had expressed views and voted in many instances in accordance with your political and economic theory that you would take a leading part in disparaging the candidacy of any person in opposition to the present Senator from the State of Maryland.

When I read your editorial of June 3, my confidence in your paper was moved up at least another notch. Your statement concerning David J. Lewis was most enlightening and fair.

I congratulate you upon your clear statement of the issues to be decided by Maryland Democrats. Certainly, you have laid the foundation for a campaign which, in all likelihood, will continue on a very high plane. It is simply a question of whether the Democratic Party in the State of Maryland wants its candidate for the Senate to be an outstanding and intelligent proponent of modern trends in social legislation or a person who has been opposed to a good portion of this legislation. The question of personalities is a minor one. Both candidates are outstanding citizens of their State. The Democrats have a chance to determine the principles of their party on September 12.

As this campaign develops in the coming weeks, I hope I shall have the pleasure of reading in your paper a continued analysis of the issues involved, and I hope you will be as fair in your editorials and in the headlines as you were on June 3.

My interest in this campaign is keen, although I am not a voter in that State. I am, however, a native farmer's boy of Washington County. I went to school in the State of Maryland and utilized one of the common economies of sending my laundry back home by means of the parcel post system which David J. Lewis founded. His name was known to me in those days because of that service which he rendered. Ever since those days, I have been vitally interested in the political success of Mr. Lewis because I conscientiously believe he is one of the finest Congressmen in this country.

Although I have not schooled myself by the methods used by Mr. Lewis, I recognize him as one of our most intelligent statesmen. His conclusions are always based upon sound theory and an ample knowledge of facts. Mr. Lewis is an authority upon modern social legislation. He was a New Dealer before the World War. He is the type of politician who will save a modern democracy from mediocrity. The New Deal will, indeed, be fortunate to have such a leader in the United States Senate. If the people in Maryland want the New Deal continued, they have a chance to say so by nominating and electing David J. Lewis.

Art In The Park.

THERE is something strangely appealing about an al fresco art exhibit like that in Lafayette Park last Thursday. In the open the colors are clearer and gayer, the Nature studies appear more natural, and the bits of modeled clay seem to absorb vitality from the ground upon which they are placed.

The pictures were displayed hanging from trees, on improvised stands, lying flat on the ground, or ranged along the fence in front of the old Dolly Madison home. The monuments of both Lafayette and Kosciusko served as pedestals for the display of oils and water colors, though these two gentlemen kept their bronze backs stiffy turned to the display.

I suppose that none of the pictures would have rated as masterpieces to an accredited critic, but to me they seemed beautifully, almost miraculously, done. Since my own abortive efforts to draw, these many years ago in school, I have always regarded with awe anyone who can paint with the slightest skill.

There were, it is true, a few modernistic paintings that faintly resembled errors in judgment, or scratch pads for the cleaning of brushes, but even these appealed to me. They were creative efforts, steps toward beauty, which has, after all, a norm so highly individualistic that each person must have his own concept of the sublime. And so, though I did not understand their message, for these too I had a smile of approbation.

The artists were, for the most part, young and fresh looking. Where I was searching for something bohemian, flowing hair, smocks, tams and, perhaps wistfully, for bottles of wine, I found only people like one sees every day. There was one gentleman in a smock and tam, but as he was cutting silhouettes at the time, this workaday attire seemed quite natural in the setting.

There were several artists, equipped with easels, chalk and camp stools, who were engaged in turning out rapid portraits on demand. While I watched, no persons posed without first telling the artist to make him or her perfectly natural. "No flattery, mind you." And then, after this admonition, the subject would sit in the most unnatural of poses, not for the artist especially, but for the benefit of the onlookers.

I debated the advantages of having a likeness made in public like that. Whereas the artist is sure to do the best he can, for other prospective customers may be peering over his shoulder; because of these same kibitzers, it must be impossible for the model to present a natural countenance.

Nearly all of the paintings were for sale, and by them stood the artists, ready to wait on any prospective customer. I found this to hamper somewhat my enjoyment of the exhibits. I hated to stand for long in front of any picture for fear that the artist might try to sell it to me. And my bookstore excuse, that "I am only browsing," with which I fend off the solicitous clerks, would hardly do in a grassy park.

I felt also, that if I examined a picture closely, and then didn't buy, its maker might take this as a judgment of disapproval, whereas it was but a confession of poverty. And so at every step I tried to look as poor, and yet as appreciative, as possible.

Nor was I alone in my appreciation, for the crowd as a whole liked the pictures. Each group of exhibits had its surrounding critics, who admired and asked questions. The air was filled with such learned words as "chiaroscuro," "medium" and "patina," as both the artists and their audience gave free range to their vocabularies.

There were several exhibits of pictures drawn by children, just such things as I should like to see hung in a nursery. I have never believed that an adult can know better than a child what a child wants, and these pictures convinced me this was so. They paid no attention to balance, nor to harmony of colors, but the figures were recognizable done in hues gay enough to please the most demanding of children.

There was no lack of dolls, and live ones, if the owner possess the skill to manipulate their sinews of wire. The marionettes were Spanish, French, Chinese, or, disclaiming all nationality whatsoever, gentle monsters inspired by comic strips, or the more kindly of alcoholic dreams.

There were statues, and figurines, and masks, and much that was art, and much that was pretense. But even the worst was only a harmless sham which, in the open air and in the carnival spirit that prevailed, was accepted at its face value. An orchestra played for a while, completing the almost idyllic beauty of the scene.

For the sake of those who may find it hard to see as I saw, I shall end with the story of a friend, who, after watching an artist, finally remarked, pointing at the picture, "All I can say is that the landscape doesn't look like that to me." And the artist replied, "Ah, but don't you wish it did?"

Fair Enough

The Old Deal.

NEXT TIME Mr. Roosevelt or Honest Hal Ickes, the House Dick of the New Deal, or Wallace or Jackson, or any of those honorary proletarians who swing towels in that corner of the ring, sounds off in disrespect of the Old Deal, I would appreciate it if somebody would refresh my memory on just what was wrong with it. Because, chums, checking over my recollections, that seems to have been a pretty fair sort of era, especially by comparison with this New Deal period, and if there was anything to be sore about I want to do my duty.

PEGLER.

Wasn't that the time when they were sticking up tall buildings in all the big towns and building swell new suburbs and kicking out new cars by the millions, including some which retailed for around $6,000, and, what's more, selling them? Wasn't everybody working who could or would work? Weren't fight tickets selling for $55 a copy at the boxoffice and $100 up at the gyps, and weren't ordinary, forgotten men able to fish up the price of $25 seats a couple of times a year? Check the files and see.

Remember how it was almost impossible to get a kid to run copy or get a can of coffee for you because they were all over in the corner reading the tape? Not the baseball tape, either. Hell no, pals! They were reading that stock tape and forming little syndicates and buying stuff on margin and making money at it, too.

• • • •

AND IOWA FARMERS were selling out and hauling away for Southern California to take it easy, and ditch labor got $6 a day around here anyway, and skilled men—some of whom weren't so very skilled, at that—got 10, 12, 20.

What do you want to bet that Jim Farley's business has made half as much under this New Deal that he goes around making neck sounds, but not heart sounds, about in duty speeches for the Boss and the Party as it made under the rotten Republicans?

And taxes? Friend, who ever mentioned taxes in those days?

And if it's a question of wage levels are you telling me that wages are higher under the New Deal after—how long is it—six years than under the Old?

I do remember being pretty sore about prohibition, but, to be fair, it wasn't so bad after bootlegging got organized, and moreover, we fostered a fine domestic skill in those days which is rapidly vanishing from our civilization now. I refer to the home manufacture of gin, beer and wine. Remember, you got a can of alky and some distilled water and some gin drops and a little bottle of glycerine, and it was as much a part of ma's domestic duties to sling a batch of gin together once a week as to bake a mess of bread back in the 1900s. All gone now under repeal, and the poor doctors have lost a very reliable source of practice, in addition to which, with much less dough, the people have to pay much more for their square face, most of it for taxes, licenses and color-press pictures of pretty models in glove-tight swimming suits in the ads.

YES, I KNOW, the bankers and speculators and hustlers shoved us a lot of wallpaper stock and bonds, and everybody was knocked in the creek when the wagon threw a wheel. But you wait and see what happens to Morgenthau's Mavourneens one of these days and then tell me whether, and if so why, it's any more fun to be rooked by a political party and a lot of wabble-wits stuck away in offices in Washington than by a banker. Henry Morgenthau, for gossakes! Why, old Andy Mellon could have stolen his fillings right out of his face with boxing gloves on without Henry's even knowing it. Henry isn't the one who is shoving the queer. He just runs the building. You know, okays orders for so many mops and so many gross of paper clips and so many tons of spare parts for adding machines to keep track of that deficit. And the tape is a year behind, at that.

I just don't know, neighbor. For a long time when I would hear them say Old Deal in that curl-of-the-lip way I went along too, feeling that, yes, it certainly was terrible, but let me ask you this: How were you doing back in those terrible days, and if this New Deal is going to be so swell, when are those boys going to get through that long windup and let us see what they've got on the ball?

The Once Over

No Pleasing Him.

The month of June is here again
And summertime is back;
July will come when June is gone . . .
Dissenting: Justice Black.

The trees are like a tent of green,
The hills no verdure lack;
The days are getting longer now . . .
Dissenting: Justice Black.

All nature makes a garden 'round
Each palace and each shack;
Impartial is the month of June . . .
Dissenting: Justice Black.

The dawn breaks, rich with lovely tints;
What beauty does it pack!
The sunsets, too, are good at night . . .
Dissenting: Justice Black.

Today came after yesterday,
Tomorrow's next, my gents;
July and August follow June . . .
Note: Justice Black dissents.

We're having lovely weather now,
Soon heat will be intense;
It's hotter as the days get warm . . .
Flash: Justice Black dissents.

All days are lovely when they're nice—
This seems but common sense;
Unpleasant days are not so good . . .
Hark! Justice Black dissents.

Still what's $5,000,000 a day? When you're determined to go nuts it's worth all it costs.

A Congressional committee has approved a bill authorizing the Government to collect for the cost of a war from everybody with $1,000 or more. This constitutes the wild assumption that when a war comes there will be somebody left in America with $1,000.

Bunk! Just as soon as we all get to enjoy it there will be immediate steps by government for control and regulation.

New York Fire Commissioner John J. McElligott—and you could floor us with a hose—has come out stoutly against the reckless driving of fire apparatus. "You must slow up at all intersections and have the apparatus under control at all times," he told his men the other day. "It is better to get to the fire a little late than not at all."

It isn't the speed going to the fire as much as the speed coming back that strikes us as unnecessary.

Japanese South

Statistics Deflate Rumored Threat Of Oriental Invasion Of Latin America; 225,000 Among 100,000,000.

By A. Curtis Wilgus.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

INTEREST in the Red Peril and in threats from the Brown and Black Shirts in Latin America has not eclipsed talk of the Yellow Peril in the countries to the south of the United States.

During the past month the press of the United States has carried news items and recorded rumors of new Japanese efforts to penetrate the American continental economic system by obtaining fishing concessions in Peru, Ecuador, Panama and elsewhere along the Pacific Coast of Latin America. And every few weeks the periodicals of America contain stories about the increasing threat from Japanese emigration to Latin America.

This so-called Yellow Peril is a two-edged sword: it is economic and it is socio-political. But the seriousness of the alleged threats is unequal, for at the present time it cannot be maintained that the latter threat, as represented by attempts at Nipponese colonization in Latin-American countries, is worth more than passing notice. Certainly the consideration given the topic by some writers is out of all proportion to the importance of the problem.

Since 1906, when Japan beat Russia to her knees and the United States became conscious of Japan's desire to settle her citizens abroad, jingoes in the United States have viewed with alarm all movements of Japanese population out of the islands. At first this alarm seems to have been somewhat justified, but continued agitation of the question caused the national imagination to work and it was not long before many Americans were sure that Japan, prevented from sending colonists to this country, Canada, and Australia, would turn to Latin America for an outlet for her surplus population.

Some observers even saw a new peril from the intermingling of the Latin Americans, and especially the Indians, with the yellow race, which as a comic race might undermine Anglo-Saxon influence on the continent.

No Japanese Found At Turn of Century.

AT THE BEGINNING of this century there were practically no Japanese in Latin America, but Chinese in large numbers lived in many of the countries, having gone chiefly during the latter part of the nineteenth century. But who could fear the quiet, unassuming Chinaman who intermarried with the natives and settled down to a peaceful life? The Japanese, on the other hand, were aggressive and kept to themselves wherever they went.

For several years following 1906 a thin stream of Japanese immigrants moved into Latin America, so that in the next 20 years probably not more than 100,000 settlers had arrived. Some two-thirds of these colonists went to Brazil, Peru and Mexico, with scattered groups chiefly in Ecuador and Central America. The east-coast countries, except Brazil, have never attracted the Japanese in large numbers.

Brazil, however, presented a virgin field for foreign settlement and exploitation, and the country adopted a policy from the very first days of the last century to encourage immigration. But Japan was remote from this great South American area, and the Japanese at first moved into the region in small numbers. In 1907 the Brazilian government invited selected Japanese agricultural colonists to enter the country and in the next ten years some 15,000 arrived. By 1925 there may have been about 50,000 Japanese in Brazil, which was about one-half of the total number of Japanese in all of Latin America.

By 1928 these immigrants were coming into the country at the rate of a thousand annually. In this year the South American Development Co., a Japanese concern, was created to bring over 400,000 settlers to the single state of Para in the north. So eager were some Brazilian states to obtain Japanese settlers that in Sao Paulo the colonists were granted free travel expenses and given subsidies in cash. In Japan several companies were organized to find colonists for specific jobs or for certain regions in Brazil.

In 1930 the State of Amazonas granted a 50-year concession to a Japanese colonization company of about 2,500,000 acres on which Japanese were to settle, carry on farming, build railroads, highways, radio stations, public utilities, telephone and telegraph lines, factories, hospitals, schools, etc. Eventually these settlers were to become Brazilian citizens. But this eagerness for colonists resulted in comparatively few arrivals and by 1932 there were only about 120,000 Japanese in the whole of Brazil.

Attitude Reversed By Brazilian Leaders.

AT THIS POINT, however, many of the Brazilian state governments began to consider that continued Japanese immigration might be a menace, and pressure was brought to bear upon the central government to restrict immigration by the quota system. Accordingly, in 1934 the total annual number of Japanese immigrants was limited to 27,000 and in 1936 the 1930 concession in the State of Amazonas was annuled even though only 200 Japanese had taken advantage of the privileges offered them there. By 1936 there were probably not more than 175,000 Japanese in the country.

But still the Yellow Peril was viewed with alarm by Brazilian statesmen, and in 1937 the quota for the year was fixed at 3,546 by the minister of labor as representing 2 per cent of the total number of Japanese coming to Brazil in the preceding 50 years. According to Brazilian official figures, the number of Japanese in Brazil today is about 177,000. Certainly this number cannot constitute a menace to the social and political life of a country larger than the United States with a population of 44,000,000.

Unlike Brazil, Peru has little undeveloped land for foreign colonization, yet Japan has considered that country as a satisfactory place to send some of her surplus citizens. Thousands of Chinese had preceded Japan's colonists, some 50,000 having gone to the country in the 1860s to work on cotton and sugar plantations, replacing the Negro slave labor abolished in 1855. When in 1908 and 1909 the Peruvian government took steps to stop Chinese immigration the Japanese began to send colonists in increasing numbers. The government of Japan aided this movement through emigration companies and through direct steamship communication with Peru.

The Japanese in Peru have entered industry, being aided by the Japanese Commercial Society in Peru, which gave assistance to Japanese businessmen. But despite this encouragement the total number of Japanese in Peru is approximately 30,000 today in a country with a total of about 6,500,000. At present few colonists appear to be interested in emigrating to this South American country. Certainly no one could consider these Orientals a grave social, political, or economic menace within the country.

Chinese Preceded Japanese In Mexico.

AS IN PERU, the Chinese immigrant preceded the Japanese settlers in Mexico, but in 1906 some thousand Japanese settled in the country as the vanguard of what some observers considered would be a great migration. Only thin streams of colonists came in the following years, probably because of the unsettled conditions incident to the Diaz revolution and the chaotic aftermath. However in 1911 a Japanese steamship line began direct service to Mexico; further to encourage immigration the Mexican government gave subsidies to Japanese farmers and industrialists, paid expenses of travel, and allowed exemption from taxes and military service for a period of years after becoming citizens.

Even with this assistance the Japanese continued to come to Mexico only in small numbers, and at present there are probably not more than 6,000 Japanese in a total population of some 17,000,000 Mexicans. Thus there is nothing here to fear from the social, political and economic activities of these foreigners within Mexico.

In the remainder of Latin America the figures for Japanese colonists are very inaccurate, but there are probably about 5,000 in Argentina, 1,000 in Cuba, 800 in Bolivia, 700 in Chile, 200 in Columbia, and small groups in Costa Rica and Panama. Altogether there can be hardly more than 225,000 Japanese in all of Latin America among some 100,000,000 persons of other nationalities.

Today there is no economic, social, or political menace in Latin America from Japanese colonists or from Japanese colonization, but the economic menace from Japanese foreign trade is growing as each Japanese settler in Latin America does his best to promote it.

No one can yet predict the outcome of the present war in Asia. Perhaps, if Japan fails to take over a large area for her surplus population, she may revive her drive for colonization rights in Latin America. But a long period of time must elapse, immigration barriers must be broken down, and national pride and prejudice must be modified before the Japanese settlers can become an actual Yellow Peril in any Latin-American country.

Crisis Averted

From the London Economist

Events In Czechoslovakia.

THERE ARE TIMES when the vitality of a sick patient is gradually destroyed by repeated crises until finally the end comes through lack of any further strength to resist. There are others when a crisis survived means that the fury of the disease is burning itself out; when each spasm successfully overcome increases the chance of survival and strengthens the power and the will to resist the next attack. The international events of the past week-end (May 20-22) seem to fall into the second category.

It is much to the good that what happened on March 11-13 to Austria has not happened to Czechoslovakia on May 18-20. It is also encouraging that the credit for this negative but considerable achievement is shared by a number of European governments: our own (to whom all praise when praise is due), the French, the Polish and possibly the Russian, as well as the Czechoslovakian. It is also to the good that Germany's action has shown that when she was faced with the choice between drawing back or touching off a European explosion, counsels of moderation prevailed. Europe breathes again and begins to entertain a new hope.

• • • •

THIS LAST SPASM was brought on in circumstances which were no doubt intended to be ominously reminiscent of its predecessor. In an independent state which was Germany's immediate neighbor, a vote was due to be taken; the result would be a manifestation of the political feelings and desires of a German-speaking population whom the masters of the Third Reich were undisguisedly eager to incorporate into Grossdeutschland; and the polling was to take place under the auspices of a government which was one of Herr Hitler's betes noires.

In March the denouement was a military invasion and an annexation before the vote could be taken. In May things have not gone the same way. German troops have been moved, but they have been kept within the German frontiers and have since been withdrawn some distance into the interior. In the threatened country the polling has taken place this time in perfect order, and with no very sensational results. Still better, the leader of the German minority in Czechoslovakia has since entered into negotiations with the Czechoslovakian government for a settlement of the Sudeten German question within the framework of the Czechoslovakian state. The world has gained a reprieve, though the future is still doubtful.

• • • •

HOW DOES Europe's balance sheet stand? It seems certain that the German policy of the fait accompli, through a parade—or in some cases the actual use—or force has this time received a setback, the first really serious setback since Herr Hitler's advent to power. But this does not mean that we are out of the wood. In the last chapter of the story, the failure of the Agadir coup of 1911 did not avert the catastrophe of 1914, and the foreign policy of Germany is possibly at the mercy of hotter heads today than it was then.

This week, as in 1911, the display of the mailed fist has produced the exact opposite of the result that was intended. It has brought out the courage, coolness and competence of the Czechs; the determination of France; and, what is more, the apparently equal determination of Great Britain not to stand by with arms folded if Germany confronts them with the choice of making common cause in the defense of European liberties or suffering Europe to fall under a German military hegemony. Nor can the results of the elections in Czechoslovakia, as far as these have gone, be particularly gratifying to the Nazis.

Herr Henlein's party—whose pressure on the electors of the German regions, though severe, has been restrained in the final stages by the presence of the military—seem to be winning, on the average, about 88 per cent of the total Sudetic German vote. That is an imposing majority. It may not, however, seem so to Reichsdeutsche, whom Herr Hitler has now accustomed to a 99 per cent standard; and there is the hard fact that about 12 per cent of the Sudetendeutsche have still sufficient belief in the future of the Czechoslovakian republic to vote against the Henlein ticket.

• • • •

IT IS NOW CERTAIN that Herr Henlein can obtain by negotiation, if he chooses, every right and facility that can reasonably be demanded for the Sudetic Germans on democratic principles. The British and French governments, which have been steadily urging the Czechoslovakian government to go to the furthest possible extremes of concession, have both now publicly expressed the view that Prague is doing all that they could ask. Every Sudetic German citizen of Czechoslovakia has the prospect of living his life as "a first-class citizen" henceforward. But to the Prague government's far-reaching concessions there are definite limits. The Sudetic Germans are to enjoy these full liberties within the framework of a democratic Czechoslovakian commonwealth; and this means that there can be no totalitarian tyranny of a Nazi majority over a democratic minority in the German districts, and no tampering with the internal or external security, or the foreign policy of the republic.

Will Herr Henlein accept M. Hodza's offer on these terms? If he does accept it, will he keep his side of the bargain? Will Herr Hitler, for his part, renounce his ambition to incorporate the Sudetenland in Germany or alternatively to make the Henleinists into an instrument of the Reich for dominating Czechoslavakia? At the moment, maybe, the answers to these questions are unknown, even to Herr Hitler himself. But at least this week's events will have made him realize that circumstances alter cases.

In the case of the Rhineland, and also to some extent of Austria, there has been a strong undercurrent of opinion in many countries—and certainly in Great Britain—that Germany had not been reasonably treated, and that Her Hitler's breach of treaties was largely brought about by the short-sighted action of the victors of the Great War and their unwise delay in correcting the mistakes of the past. The Czechoslovakian affair is on a different plane. While everyone will wish that the utmost fairness should be done to German communities outside Germany, the forcible coercion of an independent state is not to be tolerated. If external dictation were once permitted to succeed, the basis of international stability would be completely undermined.

Machine Beauty

Automobile Vs. Cart.

THEY SAY the machine is an ugly thing, it isn't pretty. Well, I am not agreeing with that; no, not at all. I should say that the machine is a very beautiful thing if you look at it aright. Does nobody see beauty in a passenger engine? Have you seen Buckingham Fountain play in Grant Park under the starlit heavens some evening? It is a machine, and if you see no beauty in it I wouldn't bother to read Shakespeare if I were you. I should say that Edison is just as much a poet as Shakespeare—just different fields. Edison works with lights and gets fountains, chandeliers; Shakespeare works with words and gets sonnets and plays. Take your choice; both poetic, but in different fields.

Study of British Labor Prelude To Battle Here

Roosevelt Held Seeking Facts to Defend New Deal Policy in 1940.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's decision to have a commission study the British trade union act is regarded as reflecting the conviction among administration leaders that New Deal labor policy is in for attacks in the next Congress and the 1940 presidential campaign.

The labor policy issue is filled with political dynamite. As the President explained the purpose of the forthcoming study, ammunition to protect the Wagner labor act, not to change it, will be sought.

Machinery provided by the Wagner act for enforcement of collective bargaining is the corner stone of evolving New Deal labor policy. Mr. Roosevelt anticipates that first-hand testimony from England will show more as to unavailability of the British system for American use than otherwise, even though it also may accelerate the evolution of labor policy in this country.

Whatever the study's results, the White House has gotten the jump on a drive of constantly accumulating force to use the British law as a model for the United States.

New Deal tax policies, charged with restricting business and the flow of capital investment, were the main target of business spokesmen at the special and regular sessions of this Congress, and revision was achieved without benefit of Presidential approval.

Wagner Act Revision.

Next in order on almost every recovery prospectus outlined by business spokesmen and New Deal political opponents is revision of labor policy as exemplified in the Wagner act. This project has figured in nearly every suggestion by industrial groups and political foes of the Administration, from former President Hoover down.

No attack on the collective bargaining principle or the right to strike has been included; but double-tracking of the Wagner act to impose responsibility on labor unions as well as employers has been the keynote. Something of the kind is a definite plank in the platform on which Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, is rumored basing hopes for a Republican Presidential nomination in 1940.

Government and other research workers concur in President Roosevelt's statement that there is a dearth of factual information and no clear understanding in this country about the workings of the British act.

Unions Grow Twofold.

The political dynamite involved in the labor policy question was emphasized both by Mr. Roosevelt's denial of any intention to propose Wagner act revision on the basis of these findings, and by John L. Lewis' refusal to participate in the survey because of anxiety that it was aimed at such a revision.

The labor policy issue is considered doubly important to politicians of all parties because organized labor's ranks have been increased two-fold under the impetus of the Wagner act and the New Deal. Together, the C. I. O. and A. F. L. claim a membership of nearly 8,000,000.

That labor army is split by the jurisdictional C. I. O.-A. F. L. warfare, but its political potentialities were disclosed nevertheless in Pennsylvania's Democratic primaries and in the New York municipal election, which sent Mayor LaGuardia back into office for a second term. More recently, united C. I. O.-A. F. L. pressure was a powerful factor aiding President Roosevelt to dislodge the wage-hour standards bill—another step in evolving New Deal labor policy—from a hostile House committee.

Peru Seeks Trade 'On an Equitable Basis' With U. S.

Lima, Peru, June 5 (AP).—Foreign Minister Carlos Concha said today economic and political reasons necessitated establishment of trade between Peru and the United States "on an equitable and firm basis."

Concha, speaking on a nation-wide broadcast relayed to the United States, said his country was ready to establish a liberal policy in trade with North America and was sure it would receive the most decided co-operation from Washington.

A new trade agreement with the United States, he said, must be based on the spirit of co-operation "so brilliantly set forth by Secretary Hull at the Montevideo Pan-American Conference of 1933 and approved by that assembly as well as the peace conference at Buenos Aires in 1936."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

New Division

A division has been established in the Treasury's income tax unit to assume duties heretofore discharged by other divisions of the unit and by the miscellaneous tax unit in connection with unjust enrichment tax cases and processing tax refund cases. A. D. Burford, special agent in charge of the Dallas division of the Intelligence unit, has been designated acting head of the new division. The division's exact duties and responsibilities will be defined precisely at a later date.

Herbert Blackman, president, Treasury Local 11, U. F. W. A., answers the letter written by an official of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing Recreation League—all in connection with that recent referendum on imposing a 1-cent tax to support recreational activities. Mr. Blackman:

"The sensible business man before making an investment requires a full and complete prospectus of the enterprise into which he is to put his money. He wants to know who is behind the enterprise, who is to administer it; will there be a worthwhile return.

"These questions are relevant to the recent referendum held at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing on a proposal to set up a recreational association, to be financed by a tax of 1 cent on each meal served in the bureau cafeteria. This proposal appeared in a printed announcement distributed in the cafeteria. The announcement was unsigned and contained no indication of the authority under which it was issued and by virtue of which the referendum was to be held.

"A rapid computation of the amount of money which would be raised by this tax brought a figure ranging from $6,000 to $10,000 a year—a considerable amount of money for a recreational association. What is more important, there was no stipulation as to when the tax would be lifted or what sum of money was to be raised.

"U. F. W. A.'s Treasury Local, 11, opposed the proposal because of its unascertainable origin and because of the unfair method of raising the fund. At no time did we raise objection to the activities and value of a recreational association which would provide healthful and civic activities for employes. In fact, we in our local recognize the need for such facilities by supporting a wide range of activities, cultural and recreational.

"There are some persons, however, who might be unable or unwilling either because of physical disability or for personal reasons to participate in such activities. Just as some employes do not participate in unions others might find it impossible to take part in a recreational association—and it would be just as inequitable to seek to levy union dues upon non-union members as it would be to levy this tax against non-association members. These persons, we contend, should not be compelled to pay for activities from which they derive no benefit.

"The employes of the bureau sustained our position by thumpingly defeating the proposal 2,300 to 1,600. It was no 'few unsocial persons' who defeated the tax, but a conclusive majority of the employes, as the writer of the missive which appeared in The Federal Diary on Friday well knows. U. F. W. A.'s Treasury Local 11 is proud of its leadership in this fight and heartened by the support it received from bureau employes in the referendum. We stand ready at all times to co-operate in the furthering of recreational programs for all the employes on a democratic basis of voluntary contributions and regular membership drives."

Now, the Farm Credit Club prepares to throw—of all things—a free party. The event will be held at the Capitol Golf and Country Club (Bannockburn) on Thursday. The free cold plate supper will be served from 6 to 8 p. m., followed by free dancing from 8 to 11. The clubhouse and grounds have been reserved until midnight. We can inform you that the cold plate will contain slices of chicken loaf, baked ham and roast beef; potato salad, cheese, sweet pickle, bread and butter and your choice of beverages . . . On the same evening, the Agriculture Department Orchestra will offer a program, beginning at 8:30 o'clock, in the Departmental Auditorium, between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets. Assisting the orchestra will be members of the Newcomb-Bethesda Community Singers, and the Agriculture Department Symphonic Choir. Soloists will be Henry Gregor, organ; Glenn Carow, piano; Evelyn Baird Long, and Mildred Jackson, vocalists. Dr. Walter Bauer will direct. There is no admission charge.

Newark to Deny Thomas Permit To Speak Again

Newark, N. J., June 5 (AP).—City Commissioner Joseph Byrne, jr., declared today Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, who was bombarded with eggs and other missiles in a speech attempt here yesterday evening, would not be granted a permit for outdoor speechmaking in Newark again. Thomas had telegraphed a demand to Mayor Meyer C. Ellenstein that he be "guaranteed protection" for another meeting.

Byrne, whose department of parks and public property has sole power to issue permits for another meeting, said Thomas attempted his speech last night under a routine permit granted the Essex County Socialist Party.

Marquis James and Wife Feted By 200 at Emil Hurjas' Party

Socialites, U. S. Officials and Leading Members of Fourth Estate Join in Tribute to Biographer of 'Andrew Jackson.'

A tall, modest man who has twice won the Pulitzer prize for biography and is doubly set, therefore, against becoming a "lion," discovered yesterday that the 200 guests at the cocktail party given in his honor by Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja were just as much set on making him one.

Residential society, official society and outstanding members of the "fourth estate" passed down the receiving line to shake hands with Marquis James, author of "Andrew Jackson, Portrait of a President," and blonde, attractive Mrs. James, who is also widely known as Bessie Rowland James. She wore a white sports dress fashioned with a bolero jacket and trimmed with a colorful sash of varicolored yarn. Her hostess, Mrs. Hurja, was dressed in a floor-length gown of beige marquisette and lace.

Roses Form Decoration

Roses in slim vases, roses in deep, graceful bowls, roses centering the tea table and roses blooming in the garden formed the decorations for the party. Guests wandered from the dining room to the terrace and then upstairs to the library the walls of which are lined with "Jacksoniana," for Mr. Hurja has long made a hobby of collecting pictures and books associated with the famous President.

After the cockail party, which lasted from 5 to 7, about 50 of the company present remained for a buffet supper. Later, as the party went on and on, the music room became a popular spot with everyone joining in extemporaneous singing.

Wallace and Woodring There

Glimpsed among the many present were the Secretary of Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace, and the Secretary of War, Harry Woodring, busily conversing in one corner of the dining room; Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, in a blue flowered print dress and wide-brimmed blue hat; Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, and Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, who was one of the most stunning women there and who wore a long black chiffon dress with a black and white bolero. Also Senator and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Representative Sam Reyburn, the House majority leaders, who was everywhere at once; Mrs. Harold Hinton, Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, and Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios.

Attracting a good deal of attention was Adela Rogers St. John, who, like Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, had decided to do without the bother of wearing a hat. Senator and Mrs. Lewis B. Schwellenbach, Mrs. William T. Mann, and her sister, Miss Betty Beall, and Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin were also there.

Diplomatic Set Is Represented

Still more of those present included the Minister of Bulgaria and Mme. Dimitri Naoumoff, the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky, the Secretary of the Finnish Legation and Mme. Sigurd von Nummers, Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton and Miss Stellita Stapleton, Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Diggs, Mrs. Walter Distler, the Solicitor General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Miss Elizabeth Howry and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O'Mahoney.

Well-known newspapermen and their wives among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn Waltman, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mr. and Mrs. Carlisle Bargeron and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Short.

The Marquis Jameses will return today to their home in Pleasantville, N. Y., and plan to spend their time this summer between Pleasantville and Rye, N. Y., where they also have a house.

To Entertain Alumnae.

Mrs. Cyrus Fishburn and Miss Orrena Louise Evans will entertain Alpha Gamma Delta alumnae at the Fishburn residence, 6802 Forty-seventh street, Chevy Chase, Md., Thursday.

N. D. Morgans Wed Saturday

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Dale Morgan, who are now motoring through New England, were married on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock in a ceremony at Bethlehem Chapel of the Washington Cathedral. The nuptials were performed by the Rev. J. Russell Verbrycke, grandfather of the bride, and the Rev. Everett Jones, canon of Washington Cathedral.

Mrs. Morgan is the former Miss Helen T. Verbrycke, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. Russell Verbrycke, jr., of Washington, while Mr. Morgan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. French Morgan, also of this city.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in graceful white satin, with which she wore a long tulle veil draped from an elaborate lace coronet. She carried a large bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Katherine H. Osborne served as her maid of honor, while the four bridesmaids were Miss Constance Etz, Miss Emily Bayley, Miss Dorothy Potter and Miss May Miller. Little Jeanne Bailey was junior bridesmaid. All wore bouffant dresses of white tulle trimmed with bands of narrow blue velvet and carried old-fashioned bouquets.

Leighton Morgan served as his cousin's best man. The ushers were George Edward Foreman, John Keener, and J. Russell Verbrycke 3d and Robert Barnes Verbrycke, brothers of the bride.

Following the wedding a reception took place at the home of the bride's parents. Assisting in receiving were Mrs. J. Russell Verbrycke, jr., mother of the bride, who had chosen for her costume a gown of gray chiffon. Her corsage was of radiant roses. Mrs. French Morgan, mother of the bridegroom, wore a dress of dusty blue chiffon.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. H. B. Morgan, of Buckhannon, W. Va., grandmother of the bridegroom; Mrs. J. Russell Verbrycke, of Berlin, Md.; Mrs. Boyd Parvin and Miss Betty Parvin, both of Pittman, N. J.; J. F. Brandenberg, of New York City, and Elmer Haff, of Little Falls, N. J.

The couple will make their home at Sherwood Forest, Md., during the summer and later will take a house in Washington. The former Miss Verbrycke is a graduate of National Cathedral School. Mr. Morgan is an alumnus of the law schools of George Washington University and National University.

Nuptials June 29 For Nancy Ansell And Lt. Moorman

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Miss Nancy Lydia Ansell, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Samuel Tilden Ansell, to Lieut. Harold Nelson Moorman, U. S. A., son of Col. and Mrs. Frank Moorman.

The ceremony will take place on Wednesday afternoon June 29 at 4 o'clock in All Soul's Memorial Episcopal Church. It will be followed by a reception at the Army and Navy Country Club.

Miss Oftadahe Wed To Gale F. Lindsey

Mr. and Mrs. Gale F. Lindsey, who were married Saturday afternoon, will be at home after June 7 at their apartment at 2117 P street. The ceremony was at First Baptist Church, with the Rev. Edward Hughes Prudden officiating.

Mrs. Lindsey is the former Miss Delores A. Oftadahe, of Minnesota. Mr. Lindsey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Lindsey, of Waterloo, Iowa.

The bride wore a floor-length gown of white chiffon topped with a small lace jacket. Her shoulder corsage was of orchids and lilies of the valley. She was attended by Mrs. James Zeh, of this city, who wore yellow taffeta and whose flowers were talisman roses. Glenn Bethel was best man.

A wedding dinner was served to 50 guests at the Biltmore Club.

The Washington Alumnae Association of Phi Mu Sorority will hold its last meeting of the season tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the home of Mrs. F. Neilson Strawbridge. Plans for the coming national convention, to be held at Grove Park Inn, Ashville, N. C., from July 10 to July 14, will be discussed.

Newly elected officers of the association are Mrs. Harold Stepler, president; Mrs. Donald Cristy, vice president; Miss Elva Krogh, recording secretary; Miss Florence Evans, corresponding secretary; Mrs. F. N. Strawbridge, treasurer.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

CONVERSATION yesterday was rather desultory, owing to the various gayeties of the evening before, but most of what there was centered around the dance which Miss Elinor Ryan gave on Saturday night. Everyone agreed it was one of the loveliest and most elaborate that Washington had seen for some time.

DUDLEY HARMON

Miss Ryan's house on Foxhall road was only completed last year, but has already become known as one of the most attractive residences around these parts. Saturday evening it seemed particularly glamorous to the several hundred people at the party.

* * * *

THE BACK of the house faces on a wooded ravine, approached by a pillared terrace. The doors are sliding and extend all the way across the house, so that when they are pushed back the view from the hall seems to include all outdoors.

On Saturday a huge awning had been placed over the terrace, and tables were set up at which a large and elaborate supper was served. Japanese lanterns added a colorful note, and floodlights concealed in the trees played over the dancers. A pavilion had been erected at one side of the house, and nearby were two bars, one for champagne and the other for whisky.

* * * *

THE HOSTESS, who is blonde and pretty, wore a simply made white chiffon frock with a full skirt and a tucked bodice. All kinds of Ryan relatives had come from other cities for the party, and William K. Ryan, a Washington member of the clan, was also present.

Among those who enjoyed all this were Mrs. John R. Williams, Miss Mary Louise Marsh, Miss Stellita Stapleton, who topped off her gown with several enormous white orchids; Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken, Miss Dolly Corbin, Count Charles van der Straten Ponthoz, who had entertained at a dinner beforehand at the Belgian Embassy; Enid Snow, Herr and Frau Edgar Prochnik, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, Commander and Mrs. William Thomas, with their house guest, Miss Phyllis Walsh, of Philadelphia; Ralph Snowden Hill, James Mitchell, Edward Gardner and Mrs. Pendelton Mayo.

A DANCE of a different sort, but just as entertaining, promises to be that of Larry Knapp and Henry Whitney on Friday evening. They are two popular New Deal bachelors who share a house on Thirtieth street in Georgetown, where the party will be held. It should be very informal and gay.

* * * *

SUMMER PLANS: Mrs. Edmund Pavenstedt will sail July 14 for a trip to Europe. The house on Twenty-fourth street, which she and Mr. Pavenstedt have occupied this winter, has been leased for next year by Mrs. Robert Chambers, widow of the novelist . . . H. H. Sims, of the British Embassy, left yesterday for Montreal to pay a farewell visit to his mother before he and Mrs. Sims sail for Europe the middle of the month. They will have a whirl in London for a few weeks, then go to Copenhagen, and will visit the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne at their home in Norway . . . The Assistant Naval Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Coleby have taken a house at Rehoboth for the summer months, as have Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios.

* * * *

MRS. HUGH D. AUCHINCLOSS gave a luncheon, tennis and swimming party yesterday at her Virginia residence, Merrywood. These weekly outdoor parties are becoming a Washington tradition . . . Sherlock Davis had a few friends dining with him Saturday evening at the charming Georgetown house he shares with several other New Dealers. His guests included Mr. and Mrs. E. Cortlandt Parker, Miss Belle Johnson, Mrs. Mondell Gregg and Frank Currie and Simon Whitney, down from New York for the week-end.

City Club Group To Have Dinner

The business and professional group of the Women's City Club will have as its guest speaker at a dinner, Wednesday at 6:30, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, the retiring president, who will tell of her recent trip around the world. In the absence of the chairman, Mrs. John S. Bennett, Mrs. Clifford Lewis, a member of the board of directors, will preside.

Plans are being made for a special entertainment in the parlors following the first weekly Thursday night informal dinner on June 9. Members of the club and their guests will be given an opportunity to enjoy a "home talent" program. Mrs. May Belle Raymond will be hostess.

On Friday, at 1 p. m., the Friday Afternoon Bridge Club section will close its season's programme with a luncheon. The prize for the highest score made in this section during the year will be presented by Mrs. Wiley, a special guest. Mrs. George B. Hartman will be hostess.

Y. W. Member Dinner Slated

The membership committee of the Y. W. C. A. will meet at a dinner tonight at 6:15 to discuss the recent Y. W. C. A. convention in its relationship to membership. The speakers will be Miss Mabel Charest and Mrs. Albert Atwood. Miss Jessie Smith and Mrs. Frederick Feiker are arranging the dinner.

The Chevy Chase Chapter will meet at the home of Mrs. Harold E. Doyle for luncheon at 12. From 8 to 9 p. m. Miss Alice Hutchins Drake will open her series of talks, "Little Talks on Large Topics," under the directions of the education department.

Mrs. William T. Gill will speak to the Wednesday Club of 614 E street. Her topic will be on the Yellowstone National Park. The interracial committee will meet at 3:45 p. m. The Eastern High School Girl Reserve Club will hold its closing banquet at 6 p. m. Cap'n Ezry's Showboat Players, a dramatic group which business girls are invited to join, will hold its first meeting at 7:30 p. m.

Lt. Lambrecht Weds Mrs. Bell This Afternoon

Small Reception Is Slated Afterward at Army and Navy Club.

The wedding is scheduled this afternoon of Mrs. Bayard Livingston Bell to Lieut. John Osgood Lambrecht, U. S. N. The ceremony will be performed at 5 o'clock at the apartment of Mrs. Bell, 1921 Kalorama road, by Commander Joseph H. Brooks, United States Navy chaplain.

Mrs. Bell is the former Miss Annette Alger Bailey, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Elder Bailey, of Harrisburg, Pa. She is the granddaughter of Gen. Russell A. Alger of Detroit, who served as governor and then Senator of his state and was Secretary of War in the McKinley administration. Lieut. Lambrecht is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. John L. Lambrecht of Chicago.

The bride, who will be given in marriage by her brother, Russell Alger Bailey, will wear chartreuse chiffon and lace and carry a bouquet of brown and green orchids. She will also wear a wide-brimmed leghorn hat. Mrs. LePage Cronmiller, wife of Capt. Cronmiller, U. S. M. C., will be matron of honor and wear yellow chiffon.

Lieut. Lambrecht will have as best man his brother Peter Lambrecht.

There will be a small informal reception at 6 o'clock at the Army-Navy Club. The couple will go to the Naval Air Station at North Island July 5 and will take a house at Coronado, Calif.

Among out-of-town guests will be Dr. and Mrs. Fred T. Murphy of Detroit; Frederick Morgan, Col. and Mrs. Albert Stackpole and Gen. and Mrs. Edward Stackpole, all of Harrisburg; and Mrs. H. A. Boyer, of Detroit, the former Miss Frances Alger, with whom the bride made her debut in that city.

Mrs. Bell attended St. Timothy's School in Catonsville, Md. and the Spence School in New York. She also made her debut in Harrisburg in 1922.

Mrs. Bowman Seeks Va. Office

Geline MacDonald Bowman, of Richmond, former president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, has filed her application under Civil Service for the Richmond postmastership. It is the first time in the history of Virginia the head of a postonice of the first class is to be appointed under the merit system.

Prominent Richmond men and women took the initiative in urging Mrs. Bowman to file her application. A resolution was also passed by the Virginia Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs at its recent May convention expressing to the Civil Service Commission its gratification that the postmastership was to be awarded on the basis of merit. It also set before the commission its knowledge of Mrs. Bowman's executive and administrative ability and experience.

In addition to her service as national head of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs, she has been treasurer of the Alliance for the Guidance of Rural Youth since its organization, 20 years ago. During her presidency of the former organization its membership was increased by 10,000 members and its operating budget, which had shown a deficit of more than $3,000 when she took office, showed a surplus of $9,000 at the end of her two terms. Because of the outstanding quality of her administration, she was elected honorary president of the national federation at the conclusion of her second term as its president.

She was vice president for three years of the National Council of Women. She is a life member of the Women's Club of Richmond, the Richmond Chapter of the U. D. C. and Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities. She is also a member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, the National Municipal League and the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Albert E. Berry announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Polly Berry, to John Sessions on Thursday, May 26.

Dr. and Mrs. Lyon Give Guests Chance to Enjoy Rural Charms

Garden Provides Setting for 'At-Home' on Estate Near Rockville; Varied Shades of Green Enhance Beauties of Surrounding Landscapes.

Guests who motored out to the at home given yesterday afternoon by Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyon had to rub their eyes twice to believe that less than an hour before they had left city streets and dust behind them. The Lyon estate, due east of Rockville, rambles over wooded hills, dips into pool-filled gardens and stretches across acres of smooth green lawns.

As limousines rolled through the gates and up toward the light-stone house, William in his green coat and silver buttons was on hand to take care of the "cahs." Then after passing through the spacious rooms with their touches of Chinese blue vases and gold lacquered cabinets, one came out on the porch where Dr. and Mrs. Lyon received their friends. Mrs. Lyon wore a wide-brimmed brown straw hat, trimmed with white ribbon and a graceful frock of pale yellow organza at the belt of which was a cluster of orchids.

Estate Is Perfect Setting for Party

With the sun finally deciding to shine, it was a perfect day for a garden party and the garden, a perfect setting for an outdoor fete. While Sidney's Orchestra in crisp white linen suits gave encore after encore of gay, bright tunes, groups gathered around the tea tables and the punch bowl or sat chatting under the big umbrellas.

As far as the eye could see, the countryside stretched out tinted with a dozen shades of soft green. Under the large trees the grass was dappled with light and shade.

Among the many assisting Mrs. Lyon were Miss Emily Chase, Mrs. Joseph Himes, Mrs. Mary Rowland, Mrs. Ralph Williams Close, wife of the South African Minister; Mrs. Mark Bristol, who wore a pink dress under a soft French blue coat; Mrs. Chester Wells, Mrs. Henry Bridges, Mrs. William D. Leahy, Mrs. Edgar J. Murdock, Miss Elizabeth Hiden and Mrs. E. E. Robbins.

Younger Set Is Well Represented

Members of the younger set were well represented by Miss Dolly Corbin, Miss Eleanor Meem, Miss Elinor Flood and Miss Stellitza Stapleton.

Also glimpsed among the guests were Mrs. Lynn S. Horner, who wore a black and white print dress; Miss Hilda Yen, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, Gen. and Mrs. F. W. Coleman, Gen. and Mrs. Amos Fries, she in a pink frock; Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin in green; Mrs. Delos Blodgett in white and blue and Gen. and Mrs. Frank Keefer.

Among the many out-of-town guests were Dr. and Mrs. Beck, of Baltimore, and Miss Marian Lee.

Legal Sorority Elects Officers

Miss Georgia Alexander has been elected dean of Omicron Chapter of Kappa Beta Pi legal sorority, succeeding Miss Helen Goodner.

Other officers elected to serve with her for the coming year include Luella All, associaate dean; Thelma Hendrixson, recording registrar; Marian DeBelle, corresponding registrar; Marie Marks, chancellor, and Ruth Rice, marshal.

The new dean has been a member of the sorority for several years and has held other offices and committee assignments. She has a legal position in the Veterans' Administration.

Omicron is the student chapter at National University Law School, and has the distinction of being the largest chapter in Kappa Beta Pi sorority. Its active membership at present is 72 members. Other chapters of the sorority in Washington are at George Washington College of Law. There is also an alumnae group composed of transfers from the student chapters.

Hebrew Aid Circle Plans Donor Luncheon

The donor luncheon of the Hebrew Sisters Aid Circle will be held on Tuesday, June 14, at 12:30 o'clock, at the Willard Hotel. The proceeds will be used for families in need.

Dr. Alec Horwitz will be the guest speaker.

Ohio Girl Weds D. C. Resident

Now on a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. William Kirkman Billingsley, jr., were married on Saturday evening at Grace Evangelical Lutheran Church. The Rev. C. E. Lenski, pastor of the church, officiated at the ceremony which took place at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Billingsley was Miss Ruth Amelia Teagle, daughter of Mrs. Russell D. Rowe, of Massillon, Ohio, and Logan Teagle, of Akron, Ohio. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Billingsley, of Washington.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white satin designed in empress style, and her finger tip tulle veil was draped from a coronet of satin scroll. Her shower bouquet was of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Dorothy Scott, a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Robert J. Stager, Miss Margaret Scott, Mrs. E. Willis Pittman and Mrs. Elizabeth Bell. Miss Kathryn Scott, also a cousin of the bride, served as junior bridesmaid. The attendants all wore gowns of pink net made in bouffant style over varying shades of taffeta and carried old-fashioned colonial bouquets.

C. Willard Camalier, jr., was best man and the ushers included Clarence Miller, Robert J. Stager and Dr. Charles S. Coakley.

Following the ceremony a reception for the immediate families was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Scott, of Silver Spring, Md., uncle and aunt of the bride and with whom she has been making her home.

Mr. Billingsley is a student at George Washington University Medical School and previously attended Duke University. He is a member of Phi Chi medical fraternity and Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Mr. and Mrs. John Barnes Hall, of Middleburg, Va., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Margaret Frances Hall, to Herbert Spencer Howell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Howell, of Washington. The ceremony was performed in Leesburg on Saturday by the Rev. G. Payton Craighill, rector of St. James Episcopal Church.

The bride was graduated from the Garfield School of Nursing and previously from the Aldie High School. Mr. Howell is a graduate of George Washington University and holds a position in the Library of Congress.

Mr. and Mrs. Howell will be at home to their friends at 1445 Ogden Gardens, Washington, after June 15.

Homer Lockwood Weds in Saranac

Homer Winthrop Lockwood and Miss Lucille Schlesinger, of Saranac Lake, N. Y., were married Saturday evening at Saranac at the home of the bride's parents. The bridegroom who now lives in Saranac, is the son of Mrs. Thomas W. Lockwood, of Washington, who attended the wedding, and the late Mr. Lockwood.

The Rev. Dr. Lockwood Maddox, pastor of a Presbyterian Church in Saranac, officiated.

Mr. Lockwood studied at Friends School and St. Alban's School for Boys here. He was graduated in 1914 from the University of Virginia, where he was a member of Phi Kappa Sigma.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Write Constantly, Study Markets, Improve Technique, Bring Fresh Viewpoint—Advice to Writers.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Perhaps "Magazine Man," after expressing his conviction that there is no chance for the beginner to sell his fiction other than through a literary agent, will now come forward and furnish the names and addresses of a few good literary agents—not charlatans—who are acquainted with editors and their needs and who are willing to "take on" the work of beginning writers who have not yet crashed the editorial gates.

* * * *

I am quite sure that if he does so he will allay the unrest which his comment has already aroused in the minds of a number of young writers who had been endeavoring to sell their manuscripts by sending them by mail to markets they had carefully studied. But I venture to say, if he does so, he will arouse no great feeling of thankfulness in the hearts of the agents he names.

* * * *

Undoubtedly a good literary agent is a valuable possession. Such a person, through his personal acquaintanceship with editors and his knowledge of markets, can do much for an author; he can expedite the sale of manuscripts; he can secure better markets for the writer when his craftsmanship improves; he can boost prices; and he can relieve the author of the heartache that comes with rejection slips.

* * * *

However, permit me to state that I know of no first-class agent who wants to be bothered with the beginning writer who has not fully learned his craft and begun to sell. The reason is obvious. The agent makes his living through the selling of fiction; the more he sells and the bigger prices he gets, the bigger his commissions. He, therefore, finds it more advantageous to "plug" the work of clients who have already proved themselves and who are already commanding fair prices than to spend weary hours endeavoring to bring into competition with them beginning writers who have not proved their stamina and who may be one-story persons or only a flash in the pan. I know one agent who refuses to take on any more authors. Another agent of my acquaintance stated no unsolicited manuscripts were desired. Another, in view of the deluge of unsolicited manuscripts pouring into his office, asked that his name only be "whispered" to persons of very great promise.

* * * *

While "Magazine Man" evidently had most unfortunate experiences to cause him to reach the conclusions expressed, my experience has been otherwise. From years of close association with fiction writers—in the days of their novitiate as well as of their success—I can assure the beginning writer that editors do buy unsolicited manuscripts coming through the mail, without the influence of an agent or other introduction than an attractive appearance, a stamped, self-addressed envelope, a vital story and well-drawn characters.

* * * *

In this connection, Mary Haworth, let me thank you for the frank, unbiased, fearless way in which you handle the problems presented to you, and let me state that your column has not only given us plots for stories, but even their solutions, leaving us only the task of naming these well-drawn characters and letting them act out their destinies.

* * * *

I know that the first novel of one well-known writer who has a new novel out each year was promptly accepted by the only publishing house to which it was mailed. I know of many stories that sold on their only trip to an editorial office, and I know of others that made many trips before being sold—one not selling until its fifty-third trip, and then selling to the editor to whom it went on its first voyage. I know of a story that was withdrawn from a very well established agent, to be sold later by the author through the medium of the mails.

* * * *

To the beginning writer, I would say—don't worry about agents. Study the life around you, endeavor to understand it and to embody its problems in your stories; make your characters so real that you can eliminate yourself and let them carry the story forward; don't hesitate to tear down your fences and write of life as you feel it—the editor wants the new viewpoint; write constantly; study the markets; endeavor to improve your craftsmanship; and do not let rejection slips discourage you — everybody gets them. If you have the faith, and the fire, not only will editorial acceptance come your way, but eventually, when your work shows promise, you will even find the good literary agents knocking at your door.

Very truly yours, L. L. M.

"W.E.B." Applauded.

DEAR L. L. M.: You—and the literary aspirants you speak of, and to—may be interested to know that "Magazine Man" has talked with me since the letter from W. E. B. was published in this column on June 2, and that he takes off his hat to the latter's able analysis of what it takes to make a writer into a writing success. Indeed, he went so far as to say that W. E. B. had revealed the whole truth, whereas he had covered only a part of it, and that no young writer could possibly do better than to follow W. E. B.'s advice. And that, I gather, is the point you would make.

M. H.

Enterprising Magazine.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Everything Magazine Man says may be true, BUT—the Saturday Evening Post reads all except the most hopelessly unreadable manuscripts, and if there seems a glimmer of promise that the writer can write, they send you a personal letter instead of a form rejection slip. This statement is sort of unbiased and unprejudiced, because in 20 years of writing, and 15½ years of getting stuff published, they've only bought one manuscript of mine. Arlen (Mike) used to say: "Well, at least let's save our rejection slips. They might come in useful." I enjoy your column. It often annoys me, though. Is that okey-dokey by you? N. H.

Salute to Lady Writer!

DEAR N. H.: It's okey-dokey by me if my column annoys you occasionally, so long as you continue to read it and find some enjoyment in it. As one who, at an adolescent and impressionable age, palpitated through the pages of Arlen's "The Green Hat," and at a later date, and more mature age, read your poignant biographical narrative of a great poet's life, I'm happy to welcome you—for yourself and because you knew Arlen (Mike)—as a contributor to this department. Waterproof Satins Offered by Paris to Wear Rainy Days

Paris (U.P.).—It's an ill rain that brings nobody good, for rainy weather togs take on the appearance of almost anything but traditional raincoats when they come from Paris. New fabrics have left the ranks of "rubberized" cloth so far behind that it's hard to remember the days when raincoats stuck, melted, rustled and tore.

Take, for instance, the exciting black satin impermeable which Leda, leading waterproofer and rain-clothes authority, is showing. The satin looks fine enough to be an evening dress, but it's waterproof. The coat, made on loose raglan lines, is lined with specially treated taffeta in a red and white plaid.

Two other striking models use the increasingly popular navy blue and white combination. One is of waterproofed crepe de chine, navy blue, with white applique. The other is of blue and white plaid taffeta. Tiny diamond-shaped appliques form a band around cuffs and collar.

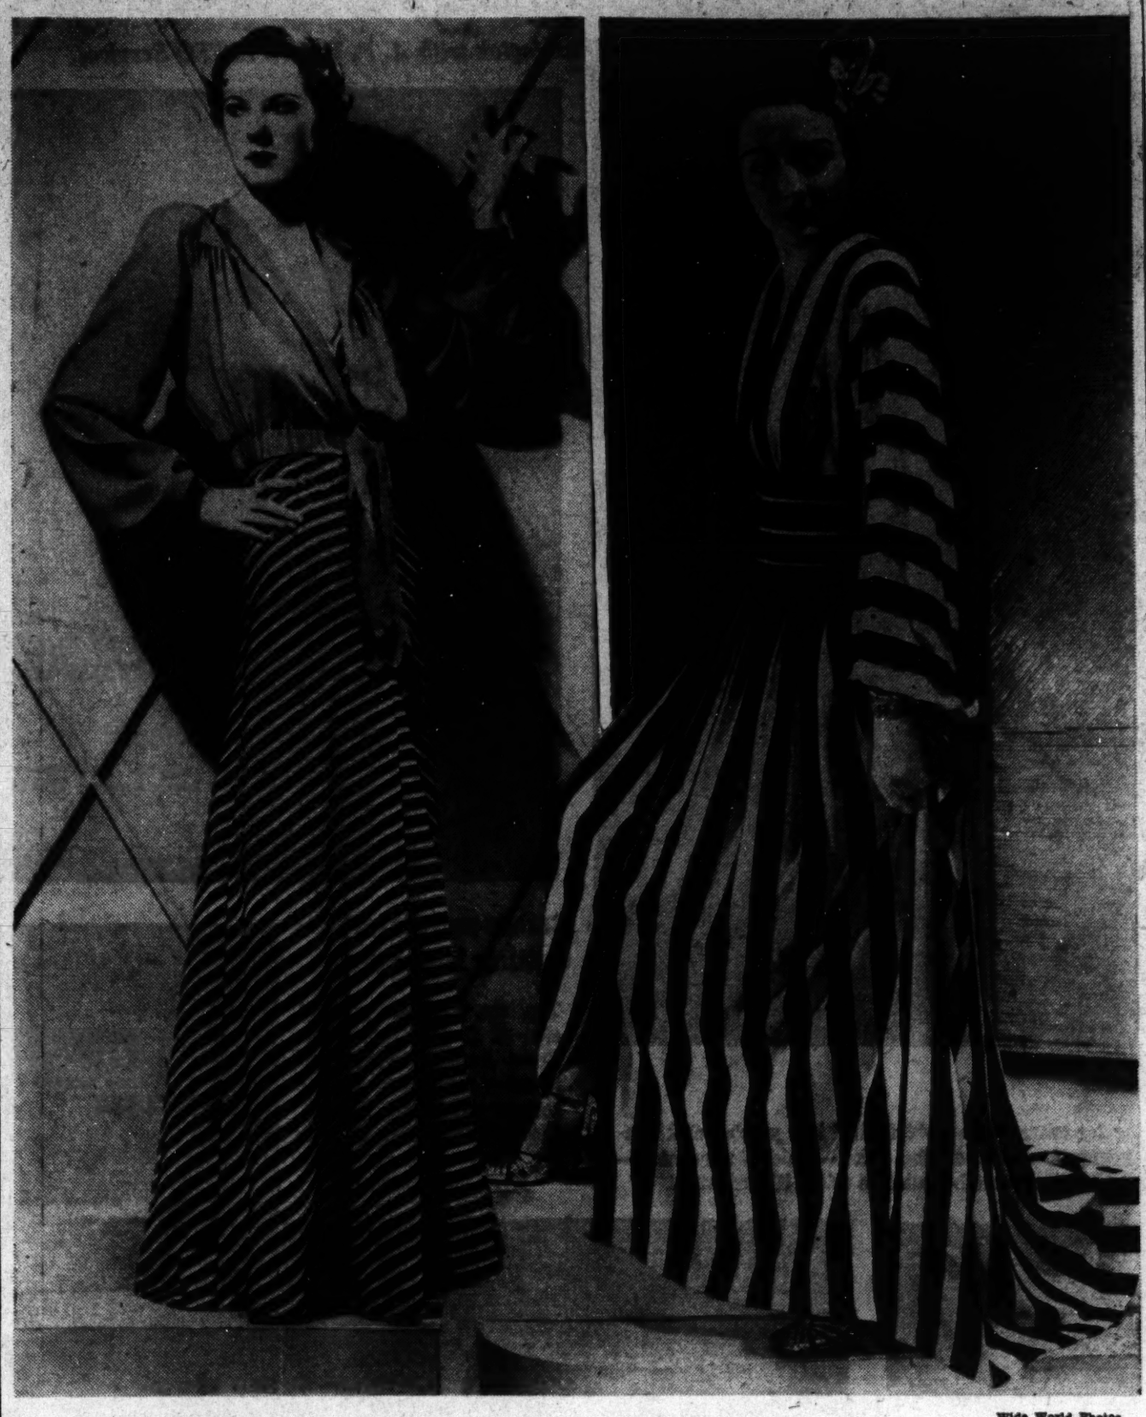
'The Lady or the Tiger?'—Fashion Raises the Issue



Wide World Photos.

THERE'S this much about stripes—you usually get noticed when you wear them. Consequently, every woman who's at all the mousey type would do well to take advantage of their vogue. Another thing about stripes—they can be manipulated to bring out the best lines of the figure, and through all sorts of diagonal and zigzag effects can conceal either bones or bumps and give the illusion of curves or angles wherever either is needed. Still another thing—stripes are youthful and dashing, and if used with discrimination always give that smart, up-to-the-minute look. Stripes are especially effective in evening apparel because they are daring and dramatic, and—well a little primitive. At left, above, is a lady who will be looked at twice when she enters a ballroom, partly because she is wearing a frock of black and white striped silk topped with a shirred jacket of cherry red crepe. The jacket ties at the waist and puffs at the wrist. Designed by Vera Borea. Photo by Associated Press. At right is a lady—yes, from Hollywood—who is wearing an evening wrap of black and white striped velvet over a white chiffon dress. The wrap was created by Walter Plunkett, and the silver kid sandal, striped with jet and diamante paillettes, was designed by Mabel Winkel to match it.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, June 5.

OF ALL the sweet girl grads who at this season are hurled bodily into the world at this time, undoubtedly the most interesting group are the 71 young ladies whom I saw commenced at the Waldorf last Friday—the first graduating class of the Tobe-Coburn School for Fashion Careers.

ALICE HUGHES.

For these handsome, smart and very alert young persons commenced with a difference. They were not turned out of learning's halls to dawdle around to shop for husbands, fritter away a summer at a classy beach or even to prepare for an honorable but quiet career instructing the young. After a year of intensive teaching and shop practice, the noble 71 are heaven-bent for careers in some branch of the fashion world. About a third of them were promised jobs before the exercises. They are well prepared, for all of them had either some college work or some practical store experience before they entered the new school.

Pretty blonde Sarah Greer, of Dallas, was one of the first three to land, and will go into the advertising department of her city's leading store. Estelle Otis is entering the "flying squadron" of saleswomen at one of our biggest Avenue bazaars. Melanie Kocyan, 22, is also starting on a sales force in Chicago.

* * * *

Tobe is a famous fashion adviser. Julia Coburn was fashion editor of a magazine before becoming cofounder and copresident of the school. The teachers and lecturers have been tops in their fields. And the Gallant 71 are already wise and experienced. They are ambitious and determined—but I hope not overstocked with the old confy. Their goal seems to be $10,000 a year at 30, and many seem to look on this as an accomplished fact. At any rate, these smart young women are starting at high speed, and I hope they have not over-dreamed!

* * * *

This is the season for passing out medals to the girls. Lily Pons got one the other day for her help to the city's blind, and Antoinette Perry, one of the theater's most brilliant directors and coaches, was handed a hunk of gold for her work of inspiring and training the stage's younger generation. Countless youngsters are indebted to this fine woman.

Old Wives' Tales About Food Combinations Proved Unsound

By Ida Jean Kain.

IN SOME of the fishing villages the menus still caution against ordering milk with sea food. We don't know how such an idea originated, for it is as far-fetched as the notion that the moon is made of green cheese. You can eat ice cream and shrimp at the same meal, unless you have an allergy to one or the other. The combination of milk with any sea food will not upset you as long as both are fresh.

In line with such peculiar ideas is the story that fish is a brain food. This started with the discovery that fish is rich in phosphorus and that the brain cells contain phosphorus. Some humorist put two and two together and called fish brain food. This is just another fish story.

Then there is the strange fancy that coffee is all right until cream and sugar are added and that adding milk to tea produces tannic acid. Tannic acid is produced by too long brewing of the tea and the milk has nothing to do with it. Needless to say, the addition of cream and sugar to coffee induces no ill effects.

Red Meats All Right.

Nor is there any scientific evidence to support the theory that red meats are more harmful than white meats.

A few years ago there was great concern over the acid-alkaline balance. We were threatened with all kinds of minor ailments unless we took precautions against acidosis. And now we have it on the best authority that in health the body is naturally in a state of mild alkalinity. Don't think up minor worries! As long as you are alive, you may be fairly certain that you are on the alkaline side.

The acid-base balance lingers on in the food of compatible eating, in which the combination of protein and starch is rigidly avoided. Even overweight is blamed on an acid condition. Obesity is supposed to result when carbohydrates are eaten with proteins or acid fruits. We hear that "because of fermentation and acidosis a person is unable to oxidize waste and glycogen is reconverted into fat." That is not true. No matter what you do about food combinations, too many calories will result in excess weight.

Better Than a Tonic.

There is no basis for any of the food combination ideas. A balanced meal which supplies the essential food elements is apt to include all the combinations and to violate all the superstitions, but it is the diet that keeps you the healthiest . . . It's better than a tonic.

Today's HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

Curing Damaged Liver.

After I discussed the newer methods of assessing liver damage last week, I was asked what could be done to put a damaged liver back into condition.

We are able now by physiological tests to recognize quite minute amounts of liver damage. And by proper management much can be done to restore a liver to full function.

The liver is, of all internal organs in the body, the one which is able best to regenerate its own cells. When the heart or the brain or the kidneys lose a cell or a group of cells, the defect is filled in with scar tissue and the destroyed cells are forever out. This is not serious in the case of the kidneys because we can get along with about one-third the kidney substance we normally own.

The liver, however, regenerates its own functioning cells, and even if a lobule is destroyed, it is possible to replace it. As with the kidney, only a part of the liver need function at any one time.

But with widespread liver damage, it is worth while trying to replace the damaged cells. Feeding sugar and simple sweets is one way to do this. The liver responds to glucose and thrives on it.

Salt is also a valuable food to assist the liver to regenerate. Several years ago Dr. Rowntree advocated salt and sugar for cirrhosis, and believed that even in that serious condition considerable regeneration occurred.

The elimination of poisons which are absorbed and damage the liver is naturally fundamental. These poisons are absorbed from the intestines, because practically all the contents of the intestines which are absorbed into the blood stream go first to the liver. Among the common poisons, alcohol comes in for most of the blame. Although some doubts have been thrown on this idea, most physicians at the bedside believe that alcohol does a great deal of liver damage, and certainly anyone who has evidence that his liver function is diminished should give up its use indefinitely.

Concentrated liver extract and vitamins B and C also seem to have a stimulating effect on the liver. They can be taken twice a week. This regimen should continue for at least three months.

The GENTLER SEX

Men About the Office.

"Miss Biff's certainly getting cranky here lately . . . never wants to do anything."

"Yeah. The trouble with her is she needs to get married."

"I tell you another that's touchy—Mrs. Chipp."

"Well, she's got no business working anyway—with a husband and all."

"She just does it to buy fur coats."

"What she needs is a bunch of children to take care of. You know nine-tenths of these married women work because they're neurotic."

"Well, I've got nothing against women personally, but 99 per cent of 'em in offices—well, I wouldn't hire 'em on a bet. Take the ones around here, for instance."

"Yeah—look at Julia Gabb . . . and that Gink girl. What do they ever do? They spend half their time in the rest room, primping and smoking."

"Yeah, and Margie Posey—what she's got is a pull with the boss."

"That's always the trouble with women in an office. They have to drag in sex."

"Yeah. You know there's really not a well-balanced one in the outfit. You take old Miss Flint . . . with her grudge against men . . . and always trying to run everything."

"She's typical of women in offices. The whole trouble with 'em is they take themselves too seriously . . . fuss around so with detail."

"Yeah, I know. Drive everybody crazy."

"Say, that girl's really off her base."

"I tell you, you can't name three out of the whole caboodle—take Dorothy Speel . . . or Helen Trott——"

"Say, they're the dizziest ones I ever saw. I don't see how they get by."

"They wouldn't in any other office.

"This place is just easy. Who else is there—oh, Jane Bunch. Well, I guess she's pretty dependable."

"Yeah, but look how she dresses. Look at her stockings. You know I'd like to help that girl pick out a hat—just once."

"Well, for that matter there aren't any really nifty dressers in the office . . . or really good-looking ones."

"Well, Betty Wilder's not so bad."

"Yeah, she's a cute kid—but boy crazy."

"The trouble with the average girl in an office, she's always got her mind on men."

"Yeah, that's the truth."

"Say, though, I will tell you one who does a good job of work—for a woman."

"Who?"

"Miss Perch. You know she tackles things like a man."

"She is pretty good. But then—well, I wouldn't call her a normal woman."

"You mean——"

"Yeah. She's just a frustrated old maid."

Puppet Plays Aid In Curing Children Of Being Bashful

New York (AP).—There's nothing like playing with puppets to help cure a bashful child.

When a child makes a puppet hero slay the fierce dragon, he really is slaying a few of his own dragons, say psychologists. So, too, says Miss Phyllis Wistrand, teacher of puppetry at the Universal School of Handicrafts in New York.

Children lose their self-conscienceness behind the curtains of the puppet stage, Miss Wistrand has found. They create characters and situations that aren't at all fantastic to them. They forget themselves—and that's the secret of the bashfulness cure.

Miss Wistrand recommends puppets instead of marionettes for small children. Puppets fit the hand like gloves. Just a wiggling of the fingers will make them act.

But youngsters seldom have the dexterity needed to manipulate the complicated strings of marionettes. And it takes a group to put on a marionette show, while one child can manage a puppet performance.

Family Feuds Out of Date At Weddings

Bride's Brother and Bridegroom Must Speak, Even if It Does Hurt.

By Margaret Wallace

IT IS NEVER good form to involve outsiders in family feuds at weddings or other entertainments. When the family meets for such occasions, especially when there are guests present, there should be an exchange of greetings and an aspect of cordiality, no matter how strained relations may be.

One young Washington woman writes of the problems she confronts in the arrangements for her wedding because her brother and her fiance are not on speaking terms, and her brother's wife is hostile to the whole family.

"My brother has always been very close to me," she writes, "and I am eager for him to be an usher at my wedding. My fiance is willing, but insists that I should ask him and also that this would not necessitate their speaking to each other. My brother's wife says she will not come to the wedding unless she receives an invitation from both my fiance and myself other than the formal invitations we are sending out. I am sure if I ask my brother he will be willing to be an usher, but I do not think it would be very pleasant, as the wedding is not to be a large one, if my fiance and my brother do not speak when they meet at the wedding and at the reception afterward.

"I am sure if I could convince my fiance that it is good manners for him to ask my brother to serve as usher and to speak to him, my brother would accept, as he wants to make me happy. Please let me know as soon as possible if there are any rules in regard to a bridegroom's inviting the ushers to serve?"

Of course, the bridegroom must ask all the ushers himself, as well as the best man. If the brother of the bride serves as an usher, it would be very bad manners and very uncomfortable for the rest of the wedding party and the guests if the two did not speak to each other. It would be tactful for the young woman to tell her brother that she is eager for him to be a member of the wedding party and that her fiance is asking him to serve (either by note or over the telephone or personally). This would pave the way.

A formal invitation addressed to both the brother and his wife should be sufficient. But, for the sake of family peace, it would be tactful for the groom to state, write or say that he hopes to see the sister-in-law of the girl he is to marry at the wedding.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Among the lovely ladies the new bachelor French Ambassador, Count Rene St. Quentin, has met in Washington, one already has the inside track . . . Two prominent Americans here are officially suspected of espionage and propaganda . . . A bet of $100 to $75 was made at a cocktail party that Senator Gillette would win from Wearin, the Corcoran-Hopkins candidate in Iowa, in today's primary election.

• • • •

Tommy Corcoran. . . . rambunctious

• • • •

Largely, the indignation aroused by Harry Hopkins' interference in the Iowa primary is due to Senator Gillette's unusual eminence among his colleagues . . . In their esteem and admiration he ranks with the top half-dozen like Borah . . . He is one of the few Senators who would rather relinquish his toga than his conscience, Corcoran and Hopkins could scarcely have chosen a more formidable candidate for their purge.

"Tommy Corcoran as cheerleader."

Typically sophomoric have been the brilliant but rambunctious Tommy Corcoran's tactics in trying to rotten-egg a few of the many Senators who opposed the packing of the Supreme Court . . . With cheerleader campus psychology, he decided the logical reprisal would be to try to pack the Senate.

Over the telephone young Boss Corcoran has been wheedling, coaxing, importuning other New Dealers to adopt his fraternity-rushing technique . . . The marvel is that he won over such a hard-headed, mature, realistic New Dealer as Harry Hopkins, who has been under great strain since his operation.

• • • •

COCKTAIL CHATTER: At the Mayflower: "With a little barbwire around 'em those Nazi-Bund camps will make even better concentration camps than they have in Germany." . . . At the Willard: "Politics is crazy; Farley wins and gets $15,000 a year, John Hamilton loses and gets $25,000." . . . In the Shoreham bar: "The Republican speeches ought to be better next campaign; they've got all five volumes of President Roosevelt's works at G. O. P. headquarters."

• • • •

There is rarely more than a third of the membership on the floors of the House and Senate, but the other two-thirds are seldom out of earshot of the bell system during a session.

These bells ring insistently in the restaurants, offices, barbershops, cloakrooms, committee rooms all over the Capitol, the House and Senate Office Buildings when a vote is about to be taken or the roll called for a quorum.

• • • •

Then from every direction the members converge at a sedate gallop on the chambers and come trooping in at every door . . .

And as soon as the vote of the roll call is finished, out they troop again, back to where the real work of Congress is accomplished . . .

There's some sentiment in favor of installing a bell in the grandstand at the ball park; but that's impractical, because it would take 20 minutes to reach the floor from there.

"—frontier vs. the effete East."

Behind the scenes the guerilla warfare 'twixt Chief Justice Hughes and Secretary Wallace still continues, bursting into view now and then via a letter in the New York Times written by one of Wallace's subordinates, or by a lawyer defending the Chief Justice, who maintains a dignified silence . . .

PAJAMA PORTRAITS.

YOUNG TURK.

The first Young Turk to reach out for bigger things is Otha Wearin, the melancholy, precocious Representative from Hastings, Iowa, whose sketch in the Congressional Directory is one of the longest, despite so short a record . . . He won by 13,000 votes in 1932, by 4,000 in 1934 and by 1,500 in 1936. He is one of Maury Maverick's Young Turks, a group of 35 House left-wingers, and it was the tireless Maury who reached out from Texas to join Corcoran, of Massachusetts, in boosting Otha as a Senatorial candidate . . . In the House Mr. Wearin has been notable for the red necktie he invariably wears, and for the rumor that he thinks of himself as a young Lincoln . . . He has voted three times to override Presidential vetoes, but his proudest boast is that he has gone along with the Administration . . . On the Hill the appraisal is that if nominated and elected, he would make a Senator of the stature of Rush Dew Holt, of West Virginia, but more pliable.

Dr. Briggs, Who Married 5,000, Declares Ministry Is No Snap

Thirty thousand pastoral calls, 5,000 marriages, 3,000 funerals, 3,000 baptisms, and 2,000 admissions to the church by letter, is the 40-year ministerial record of Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor of Fifth Baptist Church, where a reception was held last evening to mark his twenty-ninth anniversary with the church.

The pastor's wife, Mrs. Briggs, and a group from the Baptist Home for the Aged were among the guests at the function, which was sponsored by the Baptist Young Peoples Union.

Preaching at the church services later in the evening, Dr. Briggs declared that "a man who is looking for a soft place, an easy time, a big name or a fat salary should not enter the ministry." The real reward, he told the congregation, comes in watching people develop and grow under Christian influence.

"No man is big enough or wise enough to be pastor or preacher and attempt to follow any other calling," he pointed out. It is a full-time job.

Police Arrest 35 Men Here In Vice Raids

Revolvers, Knives, Stolen Goods Are Seized in Ten Dawn 'Visits.'

Staging a series of raids on alleged gambling and drinking places early yesterday morning, police climaxed a recently launched crime drive with the arrest of 35 suspects.

Several revolvers and a number of razor-edged knives were taken from prisoners, who represented one of the biggest single "snatches" made by the pickup squad. All of those arrested were colored.

Since formation of the crack police squad two months ago, major crime in the District has shown a decrease of almost 75 per cent, Capt. Ira Keck, assistant chief of detectives, declared last night. Nearly 500 criminal suspects have been brought in for identification.

Those arrested yesterday are suspected in crimes ranging from forgery to conspiracy. A number also is expected to be identified with several recent robberies and armed holdups.

Ten places in downtown and Southeast Washington were raided by the squad between 2 and 4 a. m. Most of the places visited were charged with being operated as gambling, drinking or immoral houses.

A line-up of the arrested men has tentatively been set for tomorrow night at police headquarters when crime victims and police will view the suspects.

Capt. Keck has requested all victims of crime in the District be present at the line-up to assist in identification of the suspects. A quantity of stolen goods, confiscated in the raid, also waits identification.

Kinsinger Service At 2 P. M. Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Florence Devlin Kinsinger, 65, of Silver Spring, Md., will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, 8424 Georgia avenue. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery. Eastern Star rites will be conducted by Silver Spring Chapter No. 66, of which Mrs. Kinsinger was a member.

Mrs. Kinsinger's death Friday at the Washington Sanitorium in Takoma Park took place exactly two weeks after that of her husband, the late Martin Henry Kinsinger, sr. She entered the hospital Tuesday suffering a general nervous collapse.

Born in Washington, Mrs. Kinsinger had lived in Silver Spring for 20 years. She is survived by a son, Martin Henry Kinsinger of Silver Spring; a sister, Mrs. Ellen Bruno of Washington and a brother, Arthur Devlin of Bayonne, N. J.

MacNeil Heads Adventist Body For Fifth Year

President of Conference Is Re-elected; Unity Plans Assailed.

The Rev. J. W. MacNeil yesterday was re-elected president of the Potomac Conference of Seventh Day Adventists for the fifth year at the fourth session of the ten-day camp meeting in Takoma Park, Md.

Other officers elected are C. H. Kelley, of Mount Vernon, Ohio, secretary-treasurer; Prof. Archa O. Dart, of Nashville, Tenn., secretary of education and Sabbath school; the Rev. P. E. Edwards, secretary of home missions and missionary volunteer department; C. H. Kelley, secretary-treasurer of Book and Bible House; J. A. Bee, assistant secretary of Book and Bible House, and the Rev. MacNeil, secretary of religious liberty.

Those elected to serve on the conference committee are H. A. Morrison, L. W. Graham, W. C. Hannah, of New Market, Va.; J. H. Smith, F. B. Jensen, of Richmond, Va.; C. H. Kelley, W. B. Hill and C. H. Dougherty, of Portsmouth, Va. The same men were elected to the board of the Shenandoah Valley Academy.

Preaching against unifying Christian groups, the Rev. F. B. Jensen of Richmond, Va., addressed an audience of nearly 2,000 persons in the morning session.

He asserted "once groups unite they thus put pressure on Congressional legislation for religious purposes." He called attention to the sermon of Charles Beecher in 1848 which declared a tendency to unify great bodies was a dangerous omen and was a reversion to the medieval type of Christianity.

"Our present trend in contemporaneous Christianity is a remarkable fulfillment of St. John's dramatic prophecy of Revelation 13," he said.

The growth and development of the Seventh Day Adventist faith was described by the Rev. F. C. Gilbert, a former rabbi, who preached at the evening devotion.

Dr. D. H. Kress gave a talk on diet and health at the medical clinic held in the afternoon. The clinic, under the direction of Dr. Robert A. Hare, superintendent of the Washington Sanitarium, opened yesterday afternoon.

Greenbelt Hears Its First Sermon

Members of the Greenbelt Community Church were told yesterday morning in the first sermon by their first pastor, the Rev. Mr. Robert Lee Kincheloe, to "make it their business to bring Christianity to the people on the outside."

"Modern evangelism," said the minister, "must be a continuous process of the responsibility of each church member to those on the outside who are not reached through the normal channels of church fellowship."

Sinners Belong In Church, Too, Minister Says

Dr. Carruthers Calls for Return to the Sermon on the Mount.

A return to the Sermon on the Mount was urged yesterday morning at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church by the visiting minister, Dr. John Carruthers, who read the first draft of a chapter of a forthcoming book as the sermon.

Quoting from the narrative—"The Church of All Sinners"—the clergyman declared "one of the retarding influences to practicing the Sermon-on-the-Mount type of Christianity is the now-accepted idea that a church is a place for only good people called saints who invariably feel a 'better-than' psychology toward sinners outside the church."

Dr. Carruthers, founder of the National Open Parish Hour, who is planning to return to Pasadena, Calif., in a few days, told the congregation that "a national revival of spirituality is in the making in America and the time is now coming for its preparation."

Sermon in Brightwood.

"The Holy Comforter Church, as a family parish, can make the impact of strong, abiding Christian life strongly felt in this section of Brightwood," said the Rev. Mr. John S. Kromer, new pastor of that congregation, who delivered the first sermon in the new chapel yesterday morning.

Earlier in the day, the service of holy communion was observed, with the Rev. Mr. F. J. Bohanan, rector of Rock Creek Parish, as celebrant, who was assisted by the Rev. Mr. Kromer. The new chapel is situated at Seventh and Oglethorpe streets northwest.

The new minister, who accepted the call June 1, is a graduate of the General Theological Seminary, New York City, where for the past year he has been doing post-graduate work and assisting at St. George's Parish. He was ordained by Bishop Freeman at Mt. St. Mary's Church, Aquasco, Md., April 25, 1938.

"Wings Instead of Weights."

God, immortality, the Bible, prayer and other problems of religion lend "wings instead of weights to the feet of humanity," when their beneficial aspects are considered, Dr. John W. Rustin told his congregation Sunday morning at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church South.

The adult choir, the young people's chorus and the immediate choir, comprising 120 voices, presented a program under the direction of Lillie Clayton Garrett, singing antiphonally.

August 16—Play under direction of Hester Walker Beall; concert, Chevy Chase Dairy Band.

August 30—Concert, Tempo Choral Club.

Thieves Here Get Detective's Auto And Stethoscope

A tractor with cab, a detective's auto, 27 pairs of women's stockings, a tropical worsted suit, a blood pressure outfit and a stethoscope, were reported stolen over the week-end.

The tractor, complete with cab, was last seen heading toward Washington from a point between Ashland and Richmond, Va., where it was reported stolen Saturday night.

Detective Roy E. Blick parked his car in front of the Third Precinct to take in a prisoner. The car was gone when he returned a few minutes later.

The medical equipment and about $10 worth of narcotics were contained in a physician's bag stolen from the auto of Dr. Herbert P. Ramsey, 900 Seventeenth street northwest.

Three colored men held up George McRay, 1121 Eleventh street northwest, and robbed him of $14. William Molly, 1723 Third street northeast, told police two men forced their way into his car near Sixth and D streets northwest, and demanded money. Having no money, Molly said, the men took his car.

Last Rites Today For H. N. Johnson

Funeral services will be held today at 8, p. m. for Hezekiah N. Johnson, town treasurer of Cottage City since its incorporation in 1924, who died suddenly Saturday at his home, 9 Ross street, Cottage City, Md.

Services will be held at Lee's funeral home, Massachusetts avenue and Fourth street northeast.

Mr. Johnson is survived by his wife, Mrs. George M. Johnson, a son, Edward N., and a daughter, Miss Grace Ann Johnson.

Dog's Fall in Well Brings Action to Protect Children

If they ever pass out medals for service to the children of Hyattsville, there's a small dog in line for one of the first. He took a 20-foot fall into a well yesterday, and, in so doing, led to the removal of the menace to the town's youngsters.

Receiving a call to rescue a dog which had fallen into a dry cistern on Columbia avenue, Hyattsville, Prince Georges County police arrived to find the dog safe. He had been pulled out by Millard G. Smallwood, 25, of 43 Columbia avenue, who was lowered into the 20-foot well on a rope and returned the pet to 10-year-old Jack Hurley.

Real Cell Promised Fugitive Next Time

If Richard Bennett gets locked up again by Montgomery County police, he will be incarcerated in a regulation cell.

Bennett, arrested Saturday night at Glen Echo Park for disorderly conduct and selling cigarettes without a license was not placed in the Bethesda substation cell block but in the detention room because he was not a serious offender. Early yesterday one of several prisoners in the room walked up to the desk clerk and informed him Bennett had escaped.

Bennett had used a three-quarter inch electrical conduit pipe to break the door lock and the other prisoners did not leave.

13 Ordinations By Methodists At Hagerstown

Bishop Hughes Presides at 154th Conference of Baltimore Area.

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, June 5.—Thirteen ordinations took place at St. Paul's M. E. Church today at the 154th annual session of the Baltimore Methodist Episcopal conference. Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Washington, presided and was assisted by the four district superintendents.

Bishop Hughes delivered the conference sermon.

Approximately 265 names of ministers of the conference, comprising all of Maryland with exception of the Eastern Shore; parts of Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania and District of Columbia, will be read tomorrow morning at the final conference session. The majority of these ministers will be returned, the balance either to be assigned to other charges or to be retired. The confernce will adjourn at about noon tomorrow.

The following were ordained at services this afternoon: Deacons—Robert Louise Bartlett, Mt. Airy, Md.; Earl Gough Kernahan, Madison, N. J.; Edward Harry Porter, Ellersville, Md.; James Arthur Richards, Westminster, Md.; Joseph Tucker Riley, Annapolis, Md.; John Lee Williams, Upperco, Md.; elders—John Joseph Dawson, Unionsville, Md.; Charles Henry Iley, Boston, Mass.; Thomas Ward Kemp, Mt. Airy, Md.; Richard Theodore Scholl, Canadensis, Pa.; Chester Burl Smith, Harpers Ferry, W. Va.; Paul Jennings Sampson, Union Bridge, Md.; Ira William Shindle, Savage, Md.; formerly of Smithsburg, Md.

Four district superintendents assisting in the ordination service were: Dr. Francis R. Bayley, East Baltimore district; Dr. A. H. McKinley, West Baltimore district; Dr. G. Ellis Williams, Washington district, and Dr. Harry Evaul, Frederick district. The Rev. W. M. Hoffman, conference secretary, presented the candidates for ordination.

Confederates Honor Dead At Arlington

Veterans, Sons and Daughters Pay Tribute to Two Flags.

The double theme of patriotism and of loyalty to their Confederate fathers pervaded Memorial Day exercises of the United Confederate Veterans and the Sons and Daughters of the Confederacy yesterday at Arlington.

The seven-starred, three-barred Confederate flag shared honors on the amphitheater's rostrum with the Stars and Stripes and was conspicuous in the parade of the colors which opened the ceremony.

After pledging allegiance to the Stars and Stripes, the audience, among whom were three veterans of the Civil War, solemnly saluted the flag of the Confederacy.

They were Robert W. Wilson, 92, who wore his gray uniform and black campaign hat; Peter B. Smith, 94, and E. M. Waller, 92. They took part in the brief march from the amphitheater to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Representative Richard M. Duncan of Missouri, son of a Confederate veteran, paid tribute to Gen. Robert E. Lee in the principal address of the afternoon.

Referring to him as "one of the greatest military geniuses the world has ever produced," Duncan also praised the men who followed him through four years of heart-breaking conflict without losing their spirit, pride and courage.

"That war was as inevitable as the setting sun which will end this day," Duncan declared.

The service in the amphitheater was preceded by decoration of Confederate soldiers' graves in Arlington Cemetery. Members of the Children of the Confederacy strewed flowers, and Dr. John E. Briggs, chaplain of Camp 305, Sons of Confederate Veterans, offered a prayer.

After a musical program by the Marine Band and a group of singers, Miss Claire Gilmore recited Bryant's "Thanatopsis." Chairman Frank R. McNinch, of the Federal Communications Commission, read an invitation to Confederate organizations by the Pennsylvania State Commission to attend the Gettysburg Blue and Gray reunion this summer.

Mrs. R. Stevens Pendexter, head of the D. C. chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy, presided.

Charles Coburn Returns to Union College for Summer Festival; More of Miss Whelan and 'Splinter Fleet;' Jottings.

HOLLYWOOD, for the time being, has lost one of its newest but most distinguished actors.

Charles D. Coburn, who made his first deep impression upon the consciousness of picturegoers in "Of Human Hearts," his first screen assignment, with Walter Huston, Beulah Bondi and James Stewart, and currently is to be seen as the tradition-steeped college president, with Ginger Rogers and James Stewart in "Vivacious Lady," at RKO-Keith's, temporarily has deserted the West Coast to resume his duties as director of the Mohawk Drama Festival and Institute of the Theater, conducted every summer under the auspices of the president and trustees of Union College, at Schenectady, N. Y.

BELL.

The Mohawk Drama Festival, since its foundation in 1935, has gained national note, not only as one of the foremost centers of open-air drama, but also as one of the most practical and most valuable training schools for the theater to be found on the continent. One of its vital policies is to infiltrate its casts of famous professional players with student beginners from the Institute, this affording them the advantage of association with the foremost stars of the American stage and the benefit of close observation of perfected acting technique.

Something of the character of the work done at the Mohawk Festival may be gathered from the announcement of the plays and their stars definitely chosen for presentation during the seven weeks beginning July 12, as follows:

"David Harum," with Charles Coburn in the title role; "School for Scandal," with Frances Star as Lady Teazle and Herbert Corthell as Sir Peter; "Much Ado About Nothing," with Jean Muir as Beatrice; "A Texas Steer," with Mr. Coburn as Senator Maverick Brander and James Kirkwood as Minister from Dahomey; "Trilby," with Walter Hampden as Svengali; "Lightnin'" with Fred Stone in the role of Lightnin' Bill Jones, and "High Tor," with Mr. Coburn as De Witt.

Mr. Coburn's place in Hollywood will be awaiting him upon the conclusion of this elaborate summer program.

• • • •

It is along lines of policy and methods of conduct identical with those pursued by the Mohawk Drama Festival and Institute of the Theater that Stephen E. Cochran plans to operate his new summer theater project, scheduled to get under way next month at Olney, Md. He, also, will present standard plays with distinguished professional stars and will fill minor roles from the enrollment of his National Academy of Stage Training, which will move to the Olney property for its next term. Students of the National Academy, incidentally, will be seen in an evening of one-act plays and a full length drama in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets, northwest, tonight and tomorrow night. The diversified program of one-act offerings will be presented tonight at 8:15. Tomorrow night, at the same hour, the bill will be Goldsmith's classic, "She Stoops to Conquer." Both bills have been directed by George Vivian.

• • • •

Speaking of newcomers to the theater, as we have been by indirection, it is interesting to listen to the comments of Col. Jason S. Joy on the present and probable future career of Arleen Whelan, the former manicurist who was tossed almost overnight into the principal feminine role, opposite Warner Baxter, in "Kidnapped," now on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater.

Col. Joy is a member of the executive staff of Twentieth Century-Fox Pictures, at Movietone City on the West Coast, and a visitor to Washington whose mission it is to arouse the interest of the United States Navy in Twentieth Century's forthcoming production of "Splinter Fleet." He perceives great possibilities in the future career of Miss Whelan, who is a youngster only some 17 or 18 years of age, provided she can be kept from "going Hollywood." Her success has come suddenly and might upset the equilibrium of even a much older person.

A hopeful sign is seen in the nature of Miss Whelan's conduct upon the occasion of the film's Hollywood premiere when she was present And completely flabbergasted by the sudden adulation heaped upon her. Some 3,000 people jammed around her in quest of autographs and Miss Whelan was so panic-stricken that she could hardly write her name. Directly across the street was the hotel in which she had been a manicure and that added nothing of value to the psychology of the situation. Miss Whelan, it seems, is an unspoiled, unsophisticated and uninflated young woman who doesn't yet quite know what it is all about. It is the present task of Twentieth Century-Fox to keep her that way—as Universal has kept Deanna Durbin, for instance.

And about that "Splinter Fleet." The splinter fleet, one is given to understand—in case he doesn't remember it on his own—was the name given Uncle Sam's prodigious fleet of 110-foot, wooden submarine chasers during the World War.. The suspicion is that they splintered easily if hit by anything of higher caliber than a slingshot or a BB air rifle. A new Twentieth Century-Fox screen story centers in the maneuvers of this lumber navy and Col. Joy has been enlisting the co-operation of the Navy Department in the matter of shooting much of the picture at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. This is desirable because four of the old-time sub-chasers are still in commission at the Academy and are needed for the picture. Director John Ford will be coming along shortly, in Col. Joy's wake, with most of the cast in tow. Richard Green, the young British actor who made his American debut with Loretta Young in "Four Men and a Prayer" will have the male lead. So now you know.

A charter was granted last week to the Hiser Amusement Corporation for the construction of a new theater and commercial building in the 6800 block on Wisconsin avenue, in Bethesda, Md. The theater is planned to be the largest and most modern in the Bethesda area. It will have a seating capacity in excess of 1,000 and will include several stores. Working drawings have been completed by John J. Zink, Baltimore architect, who already has the Rialto, Uptown, Newton and other Washington theaters to his credit. Construction work will begin as soon as the site is cleared of present structures and the house is expected to be ready for formal dedication in September. It will be under the personal direction of J. Henry Hiser, president owner of the State Theater in Bethesda.

Other officers of the corporation are Roger W. Eisinger, vice president; Lee Counselman, second vice president, and S. Mettenburg, secretary-treasurer. Also on the board of directors are T. Calvin Owens, Walter Kolb, A. B. Foster and Cliff Eisele. All are residents of Bethesda or vicinity.

And while we are on the subject of new theaters, the cornerstone of the new Silver Theater and 20-store shopping center, under construction at Georgia avenue and Colesville pike, in Silver Spring, Md., will be laid tomorrow at 1 p. m. In announcing the ceremony, W. E. S. Wilcox, veteran showman and owner of the Seco Theater in Silver Spring, lists many State and County officials as guests of honor, including State Senator Stedman Prescott, County Commissioner Paul Coughlan, County Treasurer Forest Walker and Park Commissioner Lacey Shaw. The Silver is well under construction, under the supervision of Kemp Mohler, of the Mohler Construction Co., from plans prepared by John Eberson, famous New York theater architect who looks like Victor Herbert's twin. The cornerstone laying will be preceded at noon by a luncheon for the guests at Mrs. K's Toll House Tavern, at which Mr. Wilcox—"Willie" to you—will act as host.

The band boys seem to think it's Christmas.

No sooner had we broken in that new tie and kerchief from Sammy Kaye than along comes a handsome pin-seal and gold cigaret case from Abe Lyman, bearing across its facade in raised gold script the legend, "From Abe Lyman to Nelson B. Bell." The case is lined with heavy black watered silk and altogether is a very opulent container for 15 cents' worth of the "largest selling cigaret in America."

Now all we need is a complete new outfit to be dressed up enough to carry it!

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, June 5.

FINANCE DEPT.: When the President made his radio address last week, his broadcast suddenly was tuned out in the shop of a New York tailor who had been making some clothes for Roosevelt . . . "I don't want to listen," the tailor explained to his customers. "The White House wrote about some flannels and I quoted a price. Back came the answer. The President, who's getting Congress to vote three and a half billion dollars for recovery, said my price was too high—and that he knew of a place in New York where he can get it for $45."

• • • •

SOCIAL NOTES: Col. Bill Donovan, pursuant to his custom of tendering a stag party every year, sent invitations to his friends—including Rex Cole, William Carey, Westbrook Pegler, Dean Aylesworth and Grantland Rice. The invitations stated that the party would be held "Thursday, June 3" . . . All the guests noticed the error in date, believed he meant "Thursday, June 2," and arrived at Donovan's home last night . . . The Colonel, however, wasn't there to greet them. He was in Wisconsin. He had meant his invitations to read "Friday, June 3."

• • • •

MUSIC DEPT.: Arthur Gershwin, younger brother of Ira and George Gershwin, retired from his Wall street brokerage business to devote all his time to song-writing . . . He signed a contract to write eight songs with Ted Fetter, cousin of Cole Porter. Their first song will be "After All These Years" . . . Chappell & Co., which published all of the Gershwin works, will publish these new compositions.

• • • •

ILLUSTRATED SEC.: The Ogontz School for Girls, in Philadelphia, is noted for its military drills and full-dress reviews—all under the supervision of Bordentown and West Point graduates . . . The editors of Life magazine heard that these drills were to be performed by the young ladies at the graduation ceremonies this week—and asked the headmistress for permission to photograph the event . . . "No, thank you," came the reply. "Not after that 'Birth of a Baby' series."

• • • •

DRAMA DEPT.: The drama class at Cornell University, whose pupils are being taught how to succeed in the theater, is presenting a show at Ithaca—a show which necessitated the borrowing of the costumes required . . . The pupils are unaware of it—but the costumes they'll wear should provide an excellent lesson. These costumes are from Rowland Stebbins' production of "Anthony and Cleopatra"—the $100,000 flop, which was the season's costliest.

• • • •

FASHIONS DEPT.: The French Ambassador to London has reported to his compatriots that the Americans still are the oddest folk extant. It resulted from his informal visit to the quarters of the new Ambassador, Joseph P. Kennedy . . . When the French Ambassador was ushered into Kennedy's room, he discovered that the American was wearing the formal attire customary for such occasions—striped trousers, winged collar, spats, etc. But within five minutes the American touch became evident. Kennedy opened his winged collar, loosened his tie, placed his feet on his desk, sat back in his chair—and began to chew a hunk of gum.

LOCAL NEWS: Dixie Davis' sister, who is being held as a material witness in the Jimmy Hines case, is following her brother—and talking to District Attorney Dewey . . . Tommy Corcoran, upset by Senator Wheeler's attack upon him, arrived in New York to discuss some new steps in response . . . The Cartoonists Guild will sue a national magazine, charging breach of contract . . . Arrangements are being made for Benny Goodman to give one concert with the New York Philharmonic next season . . . Mack Gordon, the songwriter, who bought a $25,000 yacht at first sight, now wants to sell it for $10,000. The 250-pound Gordon discovered that the hatch was too narrow for his girth.

In Hollywood With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 5.—Hollywood now happily recovered from its holiday—nursing sunburn, new technicolor spots from roller skating and a blade or two on the ice. Bumps as big as goose eggs from flying over hedges before horses.

HEDDA HOPPER

By the way, that was a right natty Horse Show whipped up in a couple of weeks by our local talent, with prize winning thoroughbreds and top stars in attendance. The prettiest picture to me was mother and daughter, in black flowing habits, on side saddles. Something romantic about that costume, and a sure way to remain on a horse.

Allan Jones and George O'Brien worked like beavers. Mrs. Jock Whitney, thoroughbred herself, followed by a giant black dog. Always a joy to see Jack Holt and his son, Tim. Tim, a motion picture veteran of 20, has bought himself a ranch in the valley, with money earned since he's been in pictures.

Now both citizenry and weather are holding dress rehearsals to welcome the Shriners. So far, the weather's ahead. California always whips up something special for the Shriners. Last time they were here, the skies squeezed out lots of tears, which enabled the visitors to send home postcards showing them fishing, wading and paddling on our main streets. The studios are preparing an electrical pageant, aimed to dim the memories of those floats sent to San Francisco and Minneapolis.

Here, we're adding a cavalcade of California, showing days of the Spanish Dons, fiesta time, rodeo, and flinging a fandango. Maybe dangerous using so many horses—they have a way of stealing the spotlight.

For the San Francisco Shrine meet some time ago, Hollywood sent a trainload of celebrities. Greeted on arrival by the late Gov. James Rolph, who presented Anita Page, the queen, with a carload of American beauty roses. Wonder what's become of her?

On practically every street corner stars were mobbed by fans, and stood up in their cars making impromptu speeches or singing songs. Invalids in wheel chairs and ambulances on the inside tract watching the parade were literally smothered with orchids and gardenias, given them by the stars as they passed by. Tom Mix all but missed the train home. With Tony, he went down to the lower part of the city and gave a one-man show for the crowds unable to see the parade. No wonder Tom remains—even though his picture days are over—one of our most loved stars.

The Shrine get-together in Minneapolis a year later did some history making, too. 'Twas the last tour of the Wampus Baby Stars, with George Raft, Wheeler and Woolsey, Roscoe Kearns, Tony Moreno and Jackie Coogan in attendance.

Jackie caused more trouble than all others put together. He left the crowd one day to make a personal appearance in St. Paul. When he didn't show up there the report got out that he had been kidnaped by the Dillinger gang, who were hiding out in that section of the country. After five hours of frantic search, Jackie calmly walked in with friends, having forgotten that the night before he had agreed to appear at the theater.

Trans-Lux

Talk about contrasts! Go to the Trans-Lux Theater this week and witness everything from "June Week" at Annapolis (the girl heart's biggest thrill) to the 500-mile auto-race at Indianapolis.

Also in the news, for international thrill, is the massing of the French fleet in the Mediterranean. Paris gives a parade glorifying the age of electricity while the Italian King pays his first visit to his newly acquired African subjects.

At the Washington Zoo we see the new 9-pound baby whose mother is the pygmy hippo and almost at the same moment the giant monarch of the Atlantic, the Normandie brings a load of Spanish silver.

If any news coverage could be more complete we would like to know how—with everything from Lew Lehr introducing the sweepstakes winners to Lou Gehrig playing his 2000th consecutive baseball game.

The Cash kidnaping case is also displayed and Gettysburg is not forgotten as veterans fly over that historic field dropping flowers on Union and Confederate graves alike.

On the short subject side of the program, there is another fascinating "Going Places," with Lowell Thomas as the commentator. There is also a Pete Smith sport short "La Savate," and another of those interesting "Screen Snapshot" sequences, including everything from Tom Sawyer to Mickey Mouse.

Football Fan.

George Brent, a graduate of National University in Ireland, was a football and baseball star during his college days. He is still extremely interested in the sports.

"KATHLEEN." John F. Argyle's picturization of a story by John Glen, adapted to the screen by Marjorie Deans, starring Sally O'Neill, with Tom Burke, Jack Daly, Sara Allgood, Jeanne Stuart, Ethel Griffies, Pat Noonan, Baby Brenda, John Forbes-Robertson, Denis O'Neil, Fred Dupree, Talbot O'Farrell, J. A. O'Rourke and others. Directed by Norman Lee.

It is a romantic comedy-drama of the "ould sod" that is revealed upon the screen of the Little Theater for the first time in Washington this week—as indigenous to the Emerald Isle, as a matter of fact, as any of the plays presented by the Abbey Theater Players from Dublin, although not so sound dramatically as those gems of Irish playwriting.

The two central characters in a drama that begins slowly but rises to a climax of considerable forcefulness are an orphan, who supports a younger brother and sister by working as a waitress in Liverpool, and a stevedore on the Liverpool quays, who is in love with her. This young Michael Rooney manages to scrape together enough money to send Kathleen and the children to the home of an aunt in Ireland. The aunt's son, Dennis O'Dwyer, seems to fulfill Kathleen's dream of a romantic attachment a little more fully than Michael and upon that situation the subsequent development of the story is based.

Sally O'Neill was taken from Hollywood to England to appear in the title role and turns in a capable performance. Tom Burke, in the role of Michael, is in the cast as much to sing as to act, both of which he does competently. Jack Daly is the Dennis O'Dwyer and two sterling actresses portray the roles of his feminine elders in the family. These are that eminent character woman, Sara Allgood—formerly with the Abbey Theater Players and last seen locally in "Shadow and Substance," with Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Julie Haydon—and Ethel Griffies.

This week's engagement of "Kathleen" at the Little is sponsored by the Irish societies of Washington. It will afford enjoyable entertainment, whether one has his roots in Erin or not.

Main Street Is Big Side - Show In Los Angeles

Sinclair Lewis Never Saw One Like 'Midway' in the Film Capital.

By Frederick C. Othman.
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, June 5.—The million-dollar movies as produced by Hollywood's greatest studios reach their surprising end less than 10 miles away on Los Angeles' almost incredible Main street.

New York's Bowery is only a pale imitation of Main street. So are Chicago's South State street and St. Louis' Market street and Memphis' Beale street. Main street has them all topped for colorful activity and motion picture exhibition, wholesale.

There are more than a dozen theaters on Main street. The big-time ones are the Follies and the Burbank, which start with their burlesque where the brothers Minsky left off. There are four movie houses which charge 10 cents. These are the de luxers.

The other Main street motion picture emporiums charge 5 cents for a six-hour show! For a nickel, anybody can drop into the Star Theater, and see five full-length pictures. A newsreel and a couple of comedies. Across the street is the Art theater. For 5 cents it only shows three features—but it also has a four-act vaudeville show!

Nickelodeons never were like this. For that matter, there's a great show on Main street constantly, and it's free.

Strip-Teaser for Lunch.

Even at noon there's a crowd at the door of the Ajax Restaurant—foot-long hot-dogs 10 cents—watching a strip-tease dancer do her stuff at the far end of the bar. Each Main street restaurant has its entertainers and to get a seat all you've got to do is buy a beer.

There's a store which sells fit-yourself eyeglasses; half a dozen shops specializing in hand-painted turtles, 25 cents, and two rival astorologers who sit on the curb in turbans and foretell the future for a dime.

Three Japanese butcher shops function on Main street, so does a Japanese auctioneer, who provides free seats for his clients and tries to sell them such valuables as extra-length suspenders and ladies' almost silk stockings.

Dr. Yip, the Chinese herb doctor, has preserved snakes in his window. Half a dozen Mexican boticas display drugs seldom seen north of the Rio Grande. The groceries sell eight dozen oranges for 25 cents, and day-old large-sized chocolate cakes for 9 cents.

Dangerous to Stop.

The further you walk down Main street the more surprising it becomes and the more dangerous to stop and look in anybody's window. The moment you pause you're yanked inside to inspect second-hand straw hats, love birds, or silver-mounted saddles.

First come the pawn shops as you go north. Then the Oriental shops appear, and finally the Mexican publishing plants. By then you're at Los Angeles' contradictory city hall—and Hollywood, or that part of it currently in trouble in the courts.

There is a law here prohibiting any building from being more than 13 stories high. That's because of earthquakes. Only lawbreaker is the city, itself, which built its city hall 25 floors high.

It's a solid city hall, though. Built of steel and concrete, and the city guarantees—it hopes—that it won't come tumbling down with the next big temblor.

At the moment Hollywood isn't any too well represented numerically in court. Mervin Leroy's former butler is suing him for false arrest in one court; Willie Pogany is suing Constance Bennett for a $3,500 bill for an oil portrait in another.

Connie Busy in Court.

Whenever court on the nineteenth floor recesses, La Bennett hops up and goes down one flight to watch "poor Mervyn" battle his former Jeeves. Leroy hasn't returned the call yet, but then Miss Bennett has a long siege on the nineteenth floor ahead of her. As soon as her portrait suit is settled, she has another case coming up, charging a radio announcer with libel. When that's finished, she has a little matter of $100,000 she claims is due her from a British film producer.

By that time business will be booming in all the tower court rooms. Jackie Coogan will be trying to collect his $4,000,000 from his mother, Simone Simon will be explaining her golden keys, and Maurice Costello will be seeking a bigger weely allowance from Daughter Dolores.

Famous Props in Unusual Collection

J. Darsie (Foxy) Lloyd, father of Harold Lloyd, has turned the basement of his Hollywood home into a museum, with exhibits limited to properties, costumes and stills used by the bespectacled comedian during his long film career, it was disclosed recently.

"Foxy" has personally supervised the arranging of souvenirs from his noted son's comedies. The stairway leading down to the basement is lined with photographs of favorite scenes from every Lloyd picture from the earliest one-reelers down to "Professor, Beware!" which the comedian is now shooting.

The souvenirs include the umbrella handle used as a good-luck charm in "Grandma's Boy," turtle-neck sweater from "The Freshman," Chinese money box from "The Cat's Paw," and boxing gloves from "The Milky Way."

Made Up.

Tomatoes used by Allen Jenkins in a closeup for "Racket Busters," didn't photograph realistically until they were made up with a thick coating of rouge.

Carey's Saddle Is In the Old Corral

Seven Film Stars Crash Bluebook

Hollywood, quite used to shocks, got a real jolt last week when the 1938 Southwest Bluebook, recognized social register of southern California, came off the press.

On the 467 pages of the book are found only seven families whose names are familiar to screen fans.

The other actors listed are Harold Lloyd, Douglas Montgomery and John Wayne, hero of Western dramas.

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: MONDAY, JUNE 6, 1938 13

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Mr. Clark C. Griffith, of the Griffith Stadium Griffiths, is still very much perturbed over the startling double play which helped the Cleveland Indians to beat his Nats the other day. He said so yesterday.

POVICH.

The double play, you remember evolved from Earl Averill's deliberate muff of a fly ball to short centerfield, and two Nats were retired while they held their bases in fear the catch would be made.

"It's a crime to let a team get away with that kind of a play," snorted Griffith. "There ain't justice in it. The base runners are helpless. They don't have any defense for that kind of stuff. It's a rotten rule and we've got to have it changed."

And what did Mr. Griffith intend to do about it?

"What do I intend to do?" demanded Griffith. "Young man, I don't trifle with these important matters. I have already done something about it. I've written to Mr. Harridge, that's what. I've sent him all the clippings of the play and told him what an injustice it works on the base runners. We can't have those kind of rules.

And did Mr. Griffith have a better rule to suggest?

"Sure, I've got a better rule. I never take up these matters unless I can offer a constructive suggestion. Under the rule I'm asking for, we can put an end to all this foolishness that makes a base runner the helpless victim of a play that isn't even a smart play.

"Why, if the outfielder tried to trap the ball and get it on the pick-up after it hit the ground, that would be all right. There wouldn't be any complaint against that. Because the outfielder is taking a risk that way and if he made it it would be a smart play. But this business of catching the ball and then letting it drop—there's no skill in that. It's like shooting fish in a barrel."

What was that new rule you were talking about, Mr. Griffith?

"Don't you worry about that. I've got a rule that would take care of the situation. And it isn't the momentary catch, either. I never did like that momentary catch rule and I'm glad they ruled it out. But even that would be better than the way things are working out now. Here's what I want 'em to do:

"I want the league to give the umpires some jurisdiction in the matter. It would be simple and nobody would be harmed if the umpires had the authority to rule whether a ball was deliberately dropped by an outfielder or not. It's a cinch for an umpire to tell that, and there would be no argument. If they wrote in a rule that only the batter was retired when a ball was purposely dropped, that would be justice and nobody would get hurt.

"I'm going to push that rule through at the next meeting, too."

Kenneth Keltner, the rugged young man who is playing third base for the Cleveland Indians, seems to be doing very nicely in his first season in the big leagues. In fact, it appears that he is going around with a .338 batting average and that only two gents in the American eLague—Jimmy Foxx and Hank Greenberg—can show more than his ten home runs.

The season is not yet two months old but young Keltner, unless he proves a dismal flash in the pan, is already being hailed as the prize rookie of 1938. And with reason.

The young man has been a potent factor in the Indians' rise to the top of the league. His long hits have put him among the leaders for run production honors and on the defense he has been no drawback. No polished third baseman as yet, he may set a new high for cleverness around the bag if he continues to improve at the same rate.

* * * *

Not until midseason of 1937 when the Milwaukee club converted him from an outfielder did Keltner have any traffic with the third base job. But under Oscar Vitt, an old third baseman himself, he has apparently caught on.

It was only two years ago that the Keltner fellow was an outfielder with a team called Fieldale in the Bi-State League, a bush circuit among Virginia-North Carolina border towns. Because he was a native Milwaukee boy, the Milwaukee club drafted him. Last winter they sold him to Cleveland for the equivalent of $40,000 in players and cash, after he batted .317 in the American Association.

Until he hits the ball, there is no reason to believe that Keltner is a potent slugger as he stands at the plate. He does not have the flat-footed stance of DiMaggio and other powerful hitters, but rocks on his heels and toes. His power, though, is concealed in a pair of steel-like wrists.

* * * *

Manager Oscar Vitt was speaking of those Keltner wrists yesterday. "They're great," he said, other day, I saw him absolutely "Why, up in Philadelphia the fooled on a pitch. He backed away and then at the last minute decided to hit it. He took only a half swing and—zowie! It was a home run into the left-field stands. That's wrist action for you."

Giants Bow, 4 to 1; Lose League Lead

Cubs Beat Phils, 7 to 1, and Take Top Place in National.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, June 5.—Rookie Johnny Vander Meer shot his fireball at the jittery Giants today and toppled the leaders into second place, as the Cincinnati Reds won their second straight of the series, 4 to 1.

The Chicago Cubs went to the top of the standings by a half game by their victory over Philadelphia.

Vandy had his fast one working, and set the Giants down to three hits. He struck out six men and the enemy went hitless from the second to the ninth inning.

Ott Scores Moore.

The Giants marked up their run in the first inning as Ott doubled to the centerfield wall to score Moore, who beat out an infield hit.

The Reds tied it up in the third and the game settled down to a pitchers' battle between Vandy and Clydell Castleman. Kampouris opened the eighth by drawing a walk nad Gamble beat out a sacrifice down the third-base line. McCormick, hitting his sixteenth double of the season, scored both men with a line drive to the scoreboard. Castleman purposely passed Lombardi, and Craft lined out a single, bringing home McCormick. Cliff Melton came to the mound to halt the rally and struck out the only Redleg in the game.

Giant Rally Dies.

With two men an bases, a Giant rally in the ninth died as Berger, pinch hitting for McCarthy, failed to get a safety.

The game was played before 27,047 fans, the largest crowd at Crosley Field since opening day.

Cubs Beat Phils, 7-1, And Go Into Lead

Chicago, June 5 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs moved into first place in the National League today by defeating Philadelphia, 7 to 1, as the New York Giants, pacemakers since early in the season, bowed to the Cincinnati Reds.

Tex Carleton, hurling steady, eight-hit ball, won his sixth victory of the campaign. The Cubs collected a similar number of safeties, but they were more timely than those garnered by the Phils.

Chicago picked up three runs in the fourth inning, as Carlton pounded two runs home with a double, and in the seventh the Chicagoans collected four more runs, with Ken O'Dea doubling with the bases loaded.

The Phillies' lone run came in the sixth, as they picked up four of their eight hits.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Barrel-chested George Abrams, one of the few promising youngsters to spring from the barren soil of Washington's amateur ranks, makes his first genuine bid for middleweight recognition tonight at Griffith Stadium, meeting Former Champion Teddy Yarosz and his piledriving left in a ten-round bout.

From a strictly neutral viewpoint, it shapes up as a mountainous task for the hollow-eyed Jewish boy, and the odds are 1 to 2 that he fails to solve the Pittsburgh veteran's puzzling shuffle-punch style. Victory will catapult Abrams into the warm glow of national recognition, but defeat will mean virtual banishment to the ill-paid preliminary ranks. It is his golden opportunity and the boy is fully conscious of that fact.

Yarosz, with his best days behind him in more than a decade of campaigning, appears to know too much for his opponent and still is physically able to utilize that knowledge to best advantage. Supporting his skill is one of the sharpest left hands in the game, a southpaw punch that darts out and raps you like a policeman's night stick.

Watch That Left.

It isn't a killing poke, but a knifelike blow that gradually dulls the senses, sometimes slices the flesh, and frequently leads to technical knockouts. It's a mean, vicious weapon, and Yarosz handles it like a machine gunner with his favorite toy of destruction. It is the thin Abrams must look for and avoid if he hopes to win.

It's true that Yarosz has gone back to some extent, but not far enough to put him in Abrams' class. The Smoky City swinger still hovers on the fringe of the top-ranking ten in his division, and even now is challenging champion Freddie Steele to a match for the crown. He isn't as sprightly as of yore, largely because of a game leg incurred in a losing scuffle with Babe Risko. But he still moves around well enough to duck the most damaging punches. And, if trapped, he can call on the experience acquired during his lengthy career to pull himself out of danger. He is a slippery gentleman to handle in the ring, as Abrams will discover.

Experience May Tell.

Yarosz figures to whip the District glove-wielder by sheer experience alone, for while Abrams' record shows 21 victories in 22 fights, none of his previous opponents measures up to the visitor's caliber. Jimmy Jones, who flattened George in his lone losing effort and was outpointed in a return match, was the highest ranking fighter to face the home-town boy. And he is only a second rater at best.

Abrams, however, is honed to a razor-like edge for the scrap and geared for the greatest performance of his tender career. He is punching better than ever. Although not hard enough to knock

Nat Notes

Ken Chase to Pitch in Indian Series Finale Today.

Against the only team he has been able to beat this season—the Cleveland Indians—Ken Chase again will take the mound today.

Manager Bucky Harris has nominated the rookie left-hander for duty in an attempt to avert a sweep of the series by the league-leading Cleveland club. Chase, who brought his wildness under control, scored a 12 inning, 5-4 victory over the Indians at Cleveland last month. He was batted out by the Athletics in the fifth inning last week, after walking seven batters.

It will be a battle of left-handers today. Manager Oscar Vitt has named the veteran Earl Whitehill, who has been one of the better Cleveland pitchers this season, to oppose Chase. It was Whitehill over whom Chase triumphed at Cleveland.

The Nats fell five full games behind the lead by their defeat yesterday, but lost no ground to the second-place Yankees and the fourth-place Red Sox, who were taking coincident beatings.

Catcher Frankie Pytlak and Pitcher Mel Harder held a protracted conference in the box after working the count to two strikes and one ball on Taft Wright in the seventh inning yesterday. It might have been deep stuff, but its effect was lost when Wright singled on the next pitch and drove home the run that put Washington in a 4-3 lead.

The young lady in the box near the Washington dugout whose favorite ball player is Goose Goslin could not stand the suspense when, with the count three and two against Goslin in the tenth, and the tying run on base, he fouled off several balls. She shielded her eyes with her hands and refused to watch developments. Eventually, Goslin walked.

Rick Ferrell, enraged when he was called out at first on a bunt in the eighth inning, returned to the dugout and flung his bat across the first-base line. Umpire George Moriarty threatened to banish Ferrell from the game, but Manager Bucky Harris softened him with a sweet smile and honeyed words that caused Moriarty to change his mind.

Buddy Lewis is in a mood to inquire the price of a base hit. He has made only two in his last 25 times at bat.

Eagles' Nine Wins.

The Arlington Eagles nosed out the Culvin Run nine, 8-7, yesterday in a ten-inning ball game played on the Arlington field. Cole, Eagle first baseman, got four hits in five attempts, to lead his teammates to victory.

Kennedy Beats Bosox, Winning Ninth in Row

Tigers Present Him With 9-Run Lead in Second and He Breezes to a 10-4 Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 5.—Vernon Kennedy mowed down the Boston Red Sox, 10 to 4, today for his ninth consecutive pitching victory as Detroit's Tigers evened the series and snapped the Croninmen's three-game winning streak.

The Tigers presented Kennedy, who is unbeaten this year, with a nine-run lead in the second inning and from that time on Kennedy simply breezed along. Although he didn't strike out a batter, he was tight with men on the bases and Boston had seven men out.

There was one bright ray in the Sox's dismal showing before the crowd of 29,000 fans. After big Jack Wilson, the starting pitcher, and Emerson Dickman failed to get a Detroit man out in that disastrous second inning, Johnny (Footsie) Marcum walked in to take up the cudgels. Though the bases were full at the time, he escaped with only one run scored against him that inning—on a long fly to centerfield—and gave the Tigers only five hits and two runs the rest of the way.

Deyoe Wins Skeet Title; Ties Record

(Picture on Page 15.)

By Jack Munhall.

George Deyoe, detective sergeant of the local vice squad, became the first District man ever to win the individual all-bore crown in the North-South Skeet championships yesterday when he posted a perfect 100 score at Bradley Farms, where the annual four-day event was closed before more than 1,000 spectators.

Deyoe, in compiling his world-record-tying score, also paced the National Capital Rebels to a successful defense of their team championship as they came from behind to defeat rchard Hill Loantaka, 486 to 481. In this order came the next three teams: Twin Pike Gun Club, with 478; Shenandoah Gun Club, with 477, and Valhalla Cardinals, with 474.

Though the twin success of National Club entries was a gratifying surprise to the largest crowd that ever witnessed the increasingly popular event, the shoot-off for runner-up in the individual competition provided the most thrilling episode of the day.

Seven Are Tied.

Seven men, including Walter Kelly, the defending champion, and captain of the All-America skeet team; Dick Shaughnessy, Boston, Mass.; Dr. Du Bois, Ambler, Pa.; Carl Schweinler, East Orange, N. J.; Ed Garland, Kellville, N. J.; Charley Gillette, Baltimore, and Harry Walters, of National, were tied with 99s at the end of the regular shooting.

Kelly, two-time winner of the North-South title, finally won out, but not until both he and Gillette had smashed more than 100 straight birds and were shooting when it was difficult to see the swiftly-moving targets.

At the end of the first extra 25-bird round, four of the original seven remained. They were Kelly, Gillette, Schweinler and Garland. Garland was eliminated by a miss in the second round and Schweinler unfortunately was obliged to drop out after the third so as to catch a train.

Great Shooting.

With the field thus narrowed, Kelly and Gillette settled down to treat the late-staying fans to possibly the greatest exhibition of "money" shooting ever seen at Bradley Farms.

With mechanical monotony the sharpshooters broke bird after bird to run their streaks to 100 straight. Kelly was first to show signs of the grind, missing on the low house of the sixth station after shattering his 111th in a row. The round was tied, however, when Gillette blew one on the low house of the sixth station doubles and they went into the sixth round.

With the visibility so poor that the spectators often were unable to follow the flight of the clays, Gillette missed both high and low birds on the fifth station. Kelly missed low house on the eighth, but steadied and shot perfectly to clinch his victory.

Class Winners.

Schweinler placed third and Garland fourth.

Winners in other classes follow: Class AA, H. G. Walters, 99; Dr. DuBois, 99; Dick Shaughnessy, 99; Class A, M. B. Orr, 98; J. M. Culley, 97; J. M. Eatherly, 97 (Culley won

Lady Gen V. Wins Absecon Island Motorboat Race

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 5.—Lady Gen V, owned by David Gerli, of New York City, and driven by Arno Apel, of Ventnor, N. J., today won the Auerbach Cup for motorboats in a 22.6-mile circuit of Absecon Island.

Apel's time was 24 minutes 47 seconds—a new record. Last year's winner, John Rutherford, of Palm Beach, Fla., made the circuit in 28 minutes and 44 seconds. Rutherford did not enter this year.

Apel's average speed was 54.74 miles per hour.

Elwood Cooke Victor In New England Play

Hartford, Conn., Jun 5 (AP).—Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., won the tennis championship of New England today by defeating Howard V. Stephens, jr., Yale senior from St. Louis, in the last two sets of a match that began yesterday, but was rained out at the end of the third set. The scores were 1—6, 5—7, 6—0, 6—0, 6—1.

Martin Buxby, of Miami, Fla., and Bernie Coghlan, of Pacific Palisades, Calif., won the New England doubles championship by whipping Cooke and Harris Everett, of Jacksonville, Fla., 1—6, 7—5, 6—3, 6—4.

Miss Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, took the women's singles title yesterday by disposing of Eunice Dean, of San Antonio, 7—5, 6—1.

Hudlin's Hit SendsKeltner Home to Win

By Shirley Povich.

A lazy pop fly off the bat of Pitcher Willis Hudlin that drifted beyond the infield and evolved as a two-base stroke of luck lifted the Cleveland Indians to a 5-4 victory over the Nats in the tenth inning yesterday.

The innocuous-looking pop, falling safely among the frantic trio of Third Baseman Buddy Lewis, Shortstop Cecil Travis and Leftfielder Johnny Stone, accomplished for the Indians what a home-run barrage earlier in the game had failed to do. It beat the Nats. The cheap two-bagger sent Ken Keltner home with the winning run and 23,000 customers home with a sour taste.

Trosky Scatters Shots.

They departed, too, with a measure of sympathy for Pete Appleton, who had pitched masterful ball in the last six innings after the Indians, notably Hal Trosky, had pumped three home runs into the stands and over the fence to take a 3-0 lead.

Trosky was the author of two of those blows. He was scattering his shots. In the second inning he smashed an Appleton pitch into the leftfield seats—a powerful poke for a left-handed hitter. And in the fourth inning he varied the procedure by slamming a homer over the rightfield wall. In the meantime, Lyn Larry had collected a third-inning homer into the leftfield bleachers.

None was on base at the time of each of the homers and thus a three-run uprising by the Nats against Mel Harder tied the score in the fifth inning. When the Nats knocked Harder out of the box and took a 4-3 lead in the seventh, there were definite visions of a victory for Appleton.

Hudlin Takes Bat.

But in the ninth, a muff by Cecil Travis reprieved the Indians. It was a pure fumble of a grounder off Lynn Lary's bat but a bit later it took on downright ugly proportions. Appleton had disposed of Bruce Campbell on a fly to Stone and he had struck out the dangerous Sammy Hale. But along came Jeff Heath with a tremendous triple over Mel Almada's head and Lary scored the tying run.

Then, in the tenth, Appleton lapsed to the extent of walking lead-off man Trosky (that man again!). Buddy Lewis gathered in Keltner's grounder to force Trosky at second and when Pytlak grounded out harmlessly to Myer for the second out, bringing the weak-hitting Hudlin to bat, Appleton appeared to be out of danger.

Appleton, moreover, had slipped two strikes past Hudlin when the blow fell. The pitcher raised the ball high over the infield and Travis, Lewis, and Stone dashed for it. Travis and Stone never did reach the spot where it fell, but Lewis with a last desperate lunge attempted to grab the falling ball with a one-hand catch. It fell from his glove and Keltner was home with the run that won the ball game.

Winner Is Hudlin.

Back in the fifth inning the Nats had outdone themselves in the ball game. Harder, who had yielded only two hits to that point, pitched a Texas League single to Almada and then walked Rick Ferrell. Appleton, himself, breathed life into the uprising by pounding a hit through the infield to score Almada. Buddy Myer beat out a hit that Lary was fortunate to knock down and the bases were filled. Then Harder walked Lewis to force over the second run, and Appleton scored the tying run from third when Wright bounced a grounder to Trosky.

Harder averted further damage in that inning by purposely passing Stone to fill the bases again and disposing of Bonura on a ground ball to Lary.

Buddy Myer launched a seventh-inning rally that put the Nats in front, 4-3. He cleverly lashed a two-bagger past Keltner into centerfield. Lewis moved him to third with a sacrifice and Wright sent him home with a single to center.

But eventually came the ninth, Travis' error, Heath's triple and the

Betty Couzens' Repulsion Victor in Riding and Hunt Club's Show

Final Choice Is Based on New Ruling

Last Minute Decision Means Victory for Dark Horse Entry.

A last-minute decision of the judges gave the grand hunter championship of the Riding and Hunt Club's two-day meet to Repulsion, owned by Betty Couzens, of Washington, in the final session yesterday afternoon at the Meadowbrook Club, on East-West highway.

A crowd of about 300 spectators was present as the leading hunters of the show went into the final class, with Charles Carrico's Recall leading the championship race up to that point with a 10-point score; Fenton Fadeley's Lacquer Lady, second, with 8 points, and Repulsion third with 7 points. Since conformation counted 40 per cent in Class 20, the handsome chestnut son of Repulse was put at the head of the line, and the 5 points that went with the blue ribbon also cinched the championship. Recall was reserve champion.

A jump-off between the two leading open jumpers of the meeting was necessary before the tricolor could be pinned in the straight performance division. After the scurry class had wound up that portion of the competition, it was found that Fred Hughes, jr.'s Black Caddy and Paul Banfield's Angel Gabriel were tied for first place, each having accumulated 8 points on the credit sheet. In the jump-off Black Caddy was an easy victor, and Angel Gabriel automatically became the reserve champion.

CLASS 13—Bridle path hacks. First, The Hour, B. F. Smith; second, Phantom, Anne Hagner; third, Autocrat, Joy Cummings; fourth, Pole Star, Col. D. S. Stanley.

CLASS 14—Working hunters. First, Recall, Charles Carrico; second, Head Rock, Fenton M. Fadeley; third, Bolter, Lieut. Commander William Justice Lee; fourth, Lacquer Lady, Fenton M. Fadeley.

CLASS 15—Open jumping. First, Angel Gabriel, Paul Banfield; second, Black Caddy, Fred Hughes, jr.; third, Broomfield, Capt. Kenneth Hoge; fourth, Hi Ho, Elizabeth Stieg.

CLASS 17—Touch and out. First, Bolter, Lieut. Commander Lee; second, Angel Gabriel, Paul Banfield; third, Lacquer Lady, Fenton Fadeley; fourth, Broomfield, Capt. Hoge.

CLASS 18—Ladies hunters. First, Questionaire, Margaret Hill; second, Lacquer Lady, Fenton Fadeley; third, Locket, Mrs. Loch Shumaker; fourth, Catalan Blue, Elizabeth Stieg.

CLASS 19—Scurry jumping. First, Black Caddy, Fred Hughes, jr.; second, Headrock, Fenton Fadeley; third, Hi Ho, Elizabeth Stieg; fourth, Tipperary Mary, Mrs. Don Bradley.

CLASS 20—Open hunters. First, Repulsion, Betty Couzens; second, God O' War, Mrs. John Pugh; third, Lacquer Lady, Fenton Fadeley; fourth, Lady Jack, Elizabeth Stieg.

OPEN JUMPER CHAMPIONSHIP—Champion, Black Caddy, Fred Hughes, jr.; Reserve, Angel Gabriel, Paul Banfield.

HUNTER CHAMPIONSHIP—Champion, Repulsion, Betty Couzens; Reserve, Recall, Charles Carrico.

Noland Nine Wins.

The Noland Supplies aggregation won a double-header yesterday by swamping the Hawk Athletic Club, 11-1, in the first tilt, and after 20 minutes of rest trounced the Alexandria Welding nine, 17-0. Scotty allowed but two hits in the opener while Lyles and Doonis duplicated Scotty's work in the nightcap. Art Doyle collected seven hits in nine trips to the plate to lead the winner's attack.

Time Out! BY CHET SMITH

At The Post . . . .

With Bill Bennings.

Dear Al:

Selections at Charles Town.

The stall gate, used at practically every race track in this country, was voted superior to other means of starting horses in the Nation-wide poll conducted by Herbert B. Swope, New York racing commissioner and chairman of the committee on starting. Of the 2,000 questionnaires distributed to all racing sections of the country, there were 1,138 votes. The gate was favored by 694 with 444 voting for the barrier. Of those who preferred the barrier, 321 backed the American single-strand webbing with 123 in favor of the Australian six-strand rope type. The votes were divided into four groups: owners and trainers, trainers, newspapermen and miscellaneous division. While the combination of owners and trainers showed almost a dead heat, the trainers voted 3 to 1 in favor of retaining the stall gate. This is natural, for trainers prefer the protection the stalls afford their horses. For some reason, newspapermen voted in favor of the barrier, at least 57 per cent frowned on the stall gate. Mr. Swope said "the" large vote which the American webbing tallied might have been prompted by the fear trainers and owners held for possible injury to horse and rider with the use of the Australian barrier, for with the latter type there is no chance of 'beating the gate.' The Australian barrier was introduced in this country during the fore part of 1937, first at Hialeah Park and later in New York, and then abandoned when the riders failed to adapt themselves to it. In the belief of many, the Australian barrier was not given a full chance to demonstrate its true worth, failure being attributed to the lack of sufficient schooling of horses, the need for proper education of riders, and the negligence of horsemen in giving their full co-operation during its trial period."

BILL.

First race—Roving Eye, third on the eligible list, will be dangerous in this field of maidens if sent to the post. Needmore gets an inside position and has a light assignment. Bursting to take care of the others.

Second race—Scoutallow turned in a sweet effort last out and needs only the right ride to take these into camp. Philigal probably needs mud but will be a factor regardless of track conditions. Broken Rhythm was badly blocked entering the stretch last out and may be ready to upset horses.

Third race—Canteret might be the right one in this rather open race. Has been improving and a change of riders may turn the trick. Shebang has plenty of speed and the distance suits. Sun Sweep for the minor award.

Fourth race—Aella has too many speed guns for this gang. I look for this one to repeat that last fine performance. Shaggy Ann almost stole a similar event here and is dangerous with her early speed. Portiam is better than generally rated.

Fifth race—Idle Elf will be going to the post for the first time here. Has worked well and may win at the first asking. Ebils is better than shown in recent efforts. Spittenimage can better that last.

Sixth race—Dixie S. has plenty of early foot and fits in well in this company. Needs only a quick get away. Royal Veil is hard to figure and deserves respect. Nay is getting good.

Seventh race—Helen Bab has been running herself into condition and appears ready to crack down this field. If Root rides, it probably will be the day. Dixie Bee has done well here and can go this long route. Lady Cirek was rushed off her legs last out.

Eighth race—Mischiefmaker has had one trip around the course and appears ready for the question. Conditions suit this plater. Stepee has had two conditioners and will be a threat. Day Letter might be best but probably needs a change of riders.

Ninth race (substitute)—If this event is used, I'll take Countertime, Tuft Hunter and Anywoman. Best bet—Dixie S.

out anybody. He is prepared to go at top speed 10 full rounds, and if condition means anything he at least has a chance—although an outside chance, to win.

The youngster has been coached long and faithfully for the test. He has seen moving pictures of Yarosz in action, and had his flaws and mistakes pointed out. He has been warned of Teddy's snake-like left, and shown how to make him miss with it and retaliate in kind. He knows Yarosz punches from a flat-footed posture and doesn't move quickly, and has been instructed to take advantage of this.

He knows he's got to win to retain his status as a "live" box-office attraction. He has been pumped full of confidence and is unworried about Yarosz's past record. He may fight over his head in a desperate attempt to win. But with it all, he's still the underdog.

A good supporting card has been arranged, with Steve Mamakos and Wicky Harkins, middleweights, and Ab Denner and Tony Dupre, featherweights; clashing in eight-rounders. Joey Temes and Billy Bullock, lightweights, open the show in a four-round engagement.

43 Hits Rain As Cardinals, Bees Divide

St. Louis Wins Thrilling Opener, 6-5; Lose Nightcap, 10-3.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 5.—With a grand total of 43 hits to show for an afternoon of fun for 17,250 fans, the Cardinals and the stinging Boston Bees split the season's first doubleheader here today. The Cards won the opener, 6 to 5, and Boston took the nightcap, 10 to 3.

The first game was packed with thrills and Pepper Martin rose up in all his glory to clinch the decision. The wild horse was rushed in as a pinch hitter with two on and doubled to tie the score at 5-5. And on Elbie Fletcher's wild relay to the plate Pepper came in head first with the winning tally.

Lon Warneke, making his first start in nearly a month, was knocked out in the ninth frame of the first game.

Four Cardinal hurlers were helpless in the second game against the Bees, who collected 14 hits in each contest.

Congressional Play Paced by Bernard

Thomson and Bones Pace Ladder Qualifications at Manor; Sharkey and Urban Lose on Final Green in Upset; Marsh Winner.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Elliott Spicer and Leroy Sasscer, who've been playing together at Indian Spring for years, cashed in on their partnership yesterday by winning the Maryland State four-ball championship, defeating their club-mates, Buddy Shakey and Arthur Urban, 1 up, in the sub-par final round battle over the home course.

The championship match was the highlight of the day's links card that included Larry Bernard's 71 at Congressional, that led the President's Cup qualifying rounds, and 71s at Manor by Tommy Bones and Club President Dave Thomson that paced the club-ladder qualifications at the halfway mark.

Z. G. Myers and C. E. Coulon won the two-man team event at Kenwood, while a similar tourney at Indian Spring went to W. A. Covert and Capt. J. R. Wood. W. R. Dempsey and Mrs. N. J. Waldron won the club events at Beaver Dam, a mixed Scotch foursome at Argyle went to Mrs. Ruth Mothershead and Nolan R. Gibson, while G. D. March topped the par-birdie-eagle play at Washington.

At Woodmont, Howard Nordlinger successfully defended his club handicap championship, while I. C. Bogart won the selective handicap tourney at Army nad Navy, and W. C. Whittle and T. M. Hunter tied in a similar event at Capital.

Spicer and Sasscer, who teamed in winning fashion in four previous encounters, took an early lead on the fifth hole yesterday and were never down, as Spicer matched par figures with a 71, and Sasscer came through at crucial points for the victory.

The winners were not over par on a single hole and had three birdies between them for a best ball of 68. The losers missed par on two holes and had four birdies for a best ball of 69.

After halving the first four holes in 4's, Sharkey and Urban missed par on the fifth and went one down as Spicer and Sasscer both scored fours. They halved the next in par and the seventh in birdies, between Spicer and Urban. The latter's ball hit in the cup on the carry on his third shot but spun out and stayed in front of the hole.

Sasscer put the winning team two up at the turn as he deuced the ninth hole as Sharkey missed a 3-foot putt for a half.

Urban cut the margin to one up on the thirteenth with a birdie 3, and after Sharkey matched the winner's birdies on 15, he squared the match with a birdie 4 on the sixteenth, dropping a 20-foot putt.

Sasscer halved the match on the seventeenth, only the second hole of the day that Spicer was over par, and the latter supplied the winning punch before a large gallery on the final hole by playing safe for a par while Urban hit a tree with his second. Sharkey was trapped in two and after exploding some 25-foot putt, missed the shot for a half.

President J. V. D. Tweedy of the Maryland State Golf Association presented large wardrobe traveling bags to the winners in the first annual four-ball championship play. The losers received fitted dresser sets. Thirty-two teams competed in the five-week event.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Larry Bernard, scoring a one under par 71, the lowest round he has scored over the course, paced the qualifying rounds for the President's Cup, donated by Theodore S. Grape, at Congressional with a net 64, after deducting a seven handicap.

W. W. Bayfield was second with 81-14, 67; J. F. McCarron, third, 75-7, 68; A. J. Walker, 81-12, 69, and F. E. Berquist, 83-14, 69. Match play in the four flights, including the championship bracket that will play for the trophy, begins next Saturday afternoon.

MANOR.

Tommy Bones, southpaw ace, and Club President Dave Thomson, who scored one of the lowest rounds of his career, paced the first week-end play in the club ladder qualifications at Manor, with one over par 71's.

Thomson, aided by an eagle three on the new fourth hole, measuring 514 yards, played the woods nine in 32, three under par, and the back nine in 39 in scoring his 71. His third shot from off the green went in the cup for the eagle three on the fourth.

W. D. McCreery, with a 74, and Clark Stoddard, with 77, were other 80-breakers.

KENWOOD.

Z. G. Myers and C. E. Coulon's best ball of 57 won the best ball event with half combined handicaps by only a stroke margin at Kenwood. George A. Tew and C. D. Joe Hanson were next with 58. The winners scored 74-17 and Tew and Hanson 70-12.

Two teams tied for third, W. J. Snow and M. E. Menk, 75-16, 59, and G. F. Harley and C. M. Dinkins, 76-17, 59.

INDIAN SPRING.

The two-man team trophy at Indian Spring, played over the 18-hole route, best ball with handicaps went to W. A. Covert and Capt. J. R. Wood. The former scored 90-14, 76 and Wood 87-18, 69. Their best ball was 27-33, 60, including the handicap.

WASHINGTON.

G. D. Marsh topped a large field in the par-birdie-eagle contest at Washington, with a 40-point total. Two points were allotted pars, three birdies and four for an eagle. Marsh had a 23 handicap.

Other winners included G. B. Skinner, 39 points, handicap 25; A. Laing, 38 points, 12 handicap; B. H. Pardoe, 38 points, 8 handicap; G. H. Chase, 38 points, 21 handicap, and G. C. Ristine, 38 points, 36 handicap.

Marsh also led the first-round participants in the Tom Moore 72-hole medal play handicap competition, with 87-23—64. Three tied for the runner-up spot with 66's, including B. H. Pardoe, 74—8; J. B. Skinner, 91—25, and H. N. Nelson, 90-24—66.

BEAVER DAM.

W. R. Dempsey won the play-off for the Marmion Trophy over A. J. Wertis at Beaver Dam, by a one-stroke margin. Dempsey scored 80-8, 72, and Wertis 82-9, 73.

Mrs. N. J. Waldron won the Spring tournament, spotting Mrs. E. L. D'Lugensky four strokes and winning by a 5 and 4 margin. The consolation went to Mrs. R. C. Mitchell who defeated Mrs. W. T. Henderson, 2 and 1.

Mel Shorey, East Potomac pro, scored a one-under par 71 against the host professional Cliff Spencer, including a back nine of 34.

ARGYLE.

Mrs. Ruth Mothershead and Nolan R. Gibson won the nine-hole mixed Scotch foursome event at Argyle with a 45, with Mrs. George Diffenbaugh and Richard Mothers head a stroke back with 46. Mrs. John M. Smith and J. H. Atkinson won the third prize with 51.

P. Hathaway and L. Beall tied in the selective handicap event, with net 75's, the former scoring 95—20, and Beall, 95—15. N. R. Gibson was second with 84-10—74, with W. Flannery, 85-11—74. A. E. Willmett, 76-6—70; O. Kaul, 81-11—70, and W. T. Allen, 93-13—80, all tied for the next prize.

WOODMONT.

Howard Nordlinger defeated Vic Zeve by a 5 and 4 margin to win the club handicap championship in a succesful title defense. The second flight finals between Dave Legum and F. Luchs will be played at a later date.

ARMY AND NAVY.

I. C. Bogart won the blind bogey event at the Service Club with a net 84, with Capt. L. E. Edwards second with 73. Three tied for third with net 71's, J. C. Whitacre, S. W. Pennoyer and O. L. Rogers.

Professional Danny Burton eagled the par 5 fifteenth hole with two long wood shots and one putt.

CAPITAL.

W. C. Whittle won his third tournament of the season at the Capital Club, scoring 82-5—76, in the blind bogey event and hitting the lucky number. T. M. Hunter tied with 89, 22—76.

Frank White scored a 3 under par 35-33—68, the lowest round of the season over the Glen Echo course, playing with J. Phelan, A. Miller and W. C. Stone.

ROCK CREEK.

Frederick Knoop proved that to take a longer club and hit the ball easy is the most successful method as he scored a hole-in-one on the 159-yard eighth hole on B course at Rock Creek with a spoon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Thompson and Maj. J. M. Edelin witnessed Knoop's first ace

Helen Dettweiler Favored in Tournament

Entering the event with the two-fold purpose of successfully defending her title and winning a second major sectional event within three weeks, Helen Dettweiler will be the favorite as 121 entries play in the qualifying round of the annual District Women's championship at Indian Spring today.

The field includes a majority of the top-ranking linkswomen of the city with the strongest delegations from the host club and Chevy Chase. Mrs. Bishop Hill, medalist in last year's event will be the chief hope of the latter club while Mrs. Betty Meckley, '37 finalist and present Middle Atlantic champion, will be the chief threat of the Four Corners Club.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 5.—The Chicago White Sox broke their ten-game losing streak by defeating the Athletics, 8 to 2, today, then lost the second game of a double-dear, 7 to 6.

Dick Siebert, first baseman whom the Athletics recently bought from Columbus, made seven hits in eight times at bat, smashing three singles and a double in the first game, and a single, double and triple in the second. He drove in one Philadelphia run in the opener and scored the other, and in the afterpiece he batted home three runs and scored two.

Lynn Nelson, seeking his sixth victory of the season, was trailing Johnny Whitehead, 4 to 2, when Siebert's seventh-inning triple tied the score in the nightcap. Siebert then scored on a single by Bill Werber which drove Whitehead to the showers.

Nelson, however, needed homers by Johnson and Chapman in the eighth to save the game, for the Sox scored twice in the ninth when Marv Owen tripled with two aboard.

Winter Hayes, Sox second baseman, was struck on the head by a thrown ball in the ninth, but was uninjured.

A four-run rally against Ed Smith in the third inning of the first game started the Sox toward their first victory in 11 contests. The runs were scored with only one infield hit, three walks and an error contributing. Chicago continued to peck away at Smith for occasional runs, while Monty Stratton held the Macks to six hits for an early triumph.

Lynch Beats Lieut. Farrin For Net Title

Hugh Takes First Local Title in 6–0, 6–0, 6–3 Match.

Hugh Lynch, often a bridesmaid but never a bride in local tennis tournaments, finally crashed through yesterday with a stunning straight-set victory over Lieut. Jimmy Farrin in the finals of the City of Washington singles play at Edgemoor.

The scores were 6—0, 6—0, 6—3.

Although Lynch had been established a strong favorite to win the annual event when neither of his perennial jinxes, Dooly Mitchel or Barney Welch, was entered, the decisiveness of his triumph over the second-seeded Farrin was startling to a large gallery.

Farrin, the former Naval Academy ace who also was a finalist in the doubles play, was on his game but never had a chance with Lynch, who staged one of the greatest exhibitions of shot making in his entire career. He covered his court to perfection, outdriving the usually steady Farrin at long range and repeatedly passing him when he chose to come to the net.

The result of the match was a foregone conclusion as early as the first set when Lynch breezed through the fifth and sixth games at love and had his foe completely bewildered by a series of scorching placements, both to the baselines and just inside the net.

Not until the third set after Lynch had piled up another love game and at one time 23 consecutive points, was Farrin able to capture a game.

Trailing, 3-1, on Lynch's service he suddenly opened up with a clever net attack which threw Lynch off his stride and cost him the game at love. Farrin then held his service and pulled to 2-3.

But Lynch came back to take the sixth and seventh games. The latter was the longest of the match and also saw Farrin make the first and only ace. Lynch, however, won out after the score had been deuced four times.

Farrin again broke his opponent's service to take the eighth game after Lynch once had match point but the eventual winner was still strong and closed out in a hurry in the following game.

Yesterday's results and today's pairings:

Bell's Homer Beats Yanks

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 5.—The St. Louis Browns clubbed Lefty Gomez for four runs in the fifth inning today and went on to a 6-to-5 victory over the Yankees in what was to have been the first game of a double-header.

Rain delayed the opener so long that the scheduled second half of the twin bill was postponed because of darkness.

Worsham Leaves Today for Open

Lewis Worsham, jr., Chevy Chase assistant professional, apparently the Middle Atlantic section's lone representative in the National Open, will leave by plane at 5:25 a. m. this morning for Denver, scene of the event starting Thursday.

Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam; Al. Houghton, Old Point Comfort; Frank Cunningham, Burning Tree; Charles Betschler, Hillendale; Al Treder and Eddie Sievens, Manor, were among the alternates passing up trips to the Open yesterday leaving Jimmy Flattery and Jack Fulton, Baltimore C. C., next on the list.

Johnny Bass, Clifton Park; Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase; George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood, Mel Shorey, East Potomac, and Leo Walper previously passed up trips, the first two as original qualifiers and the remainder as alternates.

Clarendon Wins.

The Clarendon Athletic Club nine defeated the Columbia Heights Insects, 18-13, in a free-hitting tilt on the Gordon Junior High School field yesterday.

Rose Liquor Now in First Place With 10-1 Victory Over Printers

Fourth Straight for Rose Club Brings Lead; Other News of Sandlot Events Yesterday.

Charlie Booker's curve ball limited the Union Printers to four hits yesterday, and upon this masterful mound exhibition, the Rose Liquor nine rode into undisputed possession of first place in the National City League A standings. The 10-1 tilt, which was played on the No. 9 West Potomac Field, was the fourth straight for the Rose Club.

Behind the hitting of Cullins, Hickman and Robeson, the Liquor Store lads were away to a fast start which the Printers were never able to overcome. And the victory was all the sweeter as the Police Boys Club, No. 4, which had been tied with Rose for top honors before game time, dropped its first battle of the season, 12 to 3, to the Fairfax Farms Dairy crew.

With DeBettencourt, fanning 11, issuing only one walk, and keeping seven hits well scattered, the Dairy nine had little trouble with the Police youngsters. McNally, with three hits, led the winners' attack, while Digelman was the batting star for the losers, getting three hits in four tries.

Dodgers Sink Pirates, 10-5

Flatbushers Shell Three Hurlers, Get 15 Hits.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, June 5.—Brooklyn broke out in a rash of 15 base hits today, 7 of them accounting for 6 runs in the sixth inning, to blast the Pittsburgh Pirates, 10 to 5.

Pitcher Russ Bauers was steaming along apparently safely on a 5-to-2 lead at the start of the sixth when the Brooklyn storm struck with 11 batters going to the plate against Bauers and Joe Bowman and Ed Brandt, who worked in relief.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Clara Hanrahan, 2114 Minnesota avenue southeast, Washington, D. C., plaintiff, vs. William R. Hanrahan, Philadelphia, Pa., defendant. No. 61818. Equity. The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce from the defendant, William R. Hanrahan, on the grounds of desertion. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 13th day of May, 1938, ordered that the defendant, William R. Hanrahan, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter, and The Washington Post before said day. PEYTON GORDON, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES P. STEWART, Clerk. By SOPHIE LYMAN, Assistant Clerk. 23,30,6

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE undersigned, being all of the members of a Limited Partnership formed pursuant to the laws of the State of New York, and desiring to do business in the District of Columbia as a Limited Partnership, have filed a certificate of Limited Partnership in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia; that the firm name of said partnership is G. M.-P. Murphy & Company; that the business intended to be transacted by said partnership is (a) buying or otherwise acquiring, selling or otherwise disposing of, and generally dealing, whether on behalf of the partnership or for others, in stocks, bonds or other securities and property; (b) transacting a general securities and brokerage business such as is ordinarily conducted by New York Stock Exchange firms and conforming to the constitution and rules of the said New York Stock Exchange; (c) underwriting or subscribing for, or assisting to procure underwritings or subscriptions for, stocks, bonds or other securities and/or otherwise financing or assisting to procure the financing of corporate or other enterprises; that Grayson M.-P. Murphy ceased to be a member of said partnership on October 18, 1937, the date of his death, and Gerald C. Maxwell ceased to be a member of said partnership on April 30, 1938; that Otis A. Glazebrook, Jr., Edward O. McDonnell, Alfonso P. Villa, John G. Pennypacker, William P. T. Preston, James D. Sawyer, Charles S. Sargent, J. Sawyer Wilson, Jr., Charles H. Bastier, Don M. Kelley, Barrett A. Garrett and John E. Parker are general partners; that P. Erskine Wood, Frederick Osborn, Grayson M.-P. Murphy, Jr., and Walter Russell Herrick are special partners; that the special partners have contributed as capital to the common stock of the co-partnership the following amounts in cash: P. Erskine Wood, $300,000; Frederick Osborn, $12,500; Grayson M.-P. Murphy, Jr., $50,000, and Walter Russell Herrick, $200,000; and Frederick Osborn has also contributed as capital to said common stock cash, securities and/or other property having actual and agreed values aggregating $62,500; and that the term of the partnership is to end at the close of business on June 30, 1939, subject to earlier termination upon certain contingencies. The special partners will be entitled to the return of their contributions upon termination of the partnership. In addition, the partnership agreement provides that part or all of the contribution of each special partner may be withdrawn upon his death or retirement from the partnership or on certain other contingencies, but that such withdrawal shall not be made unless and until this certificate shall have been cancelled or so amended as to set forth such withdrawal.

Dated this 24th day of May, 1938. (Signed) Otis A. Glazebrook, Jr., Edward O. McDonnell, Alfonso P. Villa, John G. Pennypacker, William P. T. Preston, James D. Sawyer, Charles S. Sargent, J. Sawyer Wilson, Jr., Charles H. Bastier, Don M. Kelley, George A. Garrett and John E. Parker, general partners; P. Erskine Wood, Frederick Osborn, Grayson M.-P. Murphy, Jr., and Walter Russell Herrick, special partners.

Bob Burns Says—

One reason why we went to New York last week was to kinda pick up a few ideas on the latest fashions, but when it comes to ladies' clothes, New York can take lessons from Hollywood. Some of our good dressers out there hav'ta have a different ensemble for every occasion.

Not long ago a woman was suin' her husband for divorce and she went to her tailor to get some clothes to wear in court. The tailor said, "Well now, you'll need a direct testimony suit, a cross-examination gown and somethin' dainty and clinging to faint in."

TERRY AND THE PIRATES Baiting the Imp of the Perverse By Milton Caniff

THE NAMELESS LITTLE GIRL ACCIDENTALLY STUMBLES UPON THE BOYS' PRISON AS SHE WANDERS FROM HER ROOM IN DEFIANCE OF YURK'S ORDERS...
TERRY CAPITALIZES THE OPPORTUNITY..
DID YOU HEAR ME? I SAID DON'T YOU DARE TELL BURMA WE'RE HERE! WE'VE FOUND TWO OLD FRIENDS, PAT RYAN AND BIG STOOP, AND WE DON'T WANT TO BE DISTURBED! —AN' TELL YURK WE WANT TO SEE HIM! SCRAM!
HOW DARE YOU CURSE AT ME IN AMERICAN?—I CERTAINLY SHALL TELL BURMA YOU ARE HERE!—AND I REFUSE TO CARRY A MESSAGE TO THAT AWFUL YURK FOR YOU!
G'WAN! BEAT IT!
OWSIE! MIST' TERRY GONE ALL NUTSY!
NO, CONNIE! DON'T YOU SEE? SHE'LL SURELY BLAB TO BURMA...

Lightning BoltKills Mother, Daughter

Newark, N. J., June 5 (U.P.).—A bolt of lightning today instantly killed Mrs. Helen Lewis, 33, and fatally injured her 13-year-old daughter, Helen.

Her husband, Arthur, 35; a son, Arthur, jr., 7, and Thomas Bain, 35, were injured when the same bolt struck a tree under which the five sought shelter from a sudden storm.

Injured by Lye.

Jesse Cassidy, 36, colored, was injured severely yesterday when an unidentified man threw lye in his face as he sat in his auto in front of 2238 Eleventh street northwest. He was treated at Freedmen's Hospital.

Trolley Stops Quickly; Woman's Arm Broken

Mrs. Ethel Richardson, of 4204 Thirty-eighth street northwest, suffered a broken arm and other injuries yesterday when she was thrown to the floor of a street car as the motorman stopped the vehicle suddenly to avoid striking an automobile, according to police. She was taken from Wisconsin avenue and Upton street northwest, where the accident occurred, to Georgetown Hospital.

Gas, Grease Explosion Burns Cafe Employe

Ralph L. Purcell, 23, employe of a restaurant in the 2300 block of Bladensburg road northeast, was badly burned on the face and hands yesterday from an explosion of gas and grease in the kitchen of the establishment. Purcell, who lives at 1213 Kennedy street northwest, was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Writes History on Paper Development

Dr. Alfred F. W. Schmidt, shown in the library of his home at 35 Bryant street northwest, where he is engaged in writing a history on the development of paper. Dr. Schmidt has served on the faculty of George Washington University for 32 years.

G. W. Library Science Director To Write His Subject's History

Dr. Schmidt Will Retire to Work on 1,800 Years of Data; Keeps Wasps' Nest to Commemorate Invention of Paper.

Ts-ai Lun sat in his doorway in China and carefully watched the branches of a tree outside.

Wasps were busy building a huge nest on it. A gentle breeze sent a delicate leaf from the nest spinning through the air. It fluttered to the doorway and Ts-ai Lun fingered it reflectively and with great care.

It was then that mankind first conceived the idea of paper, and libraries became a possibility. The time was the year 105.

Today, on a third floor study at No. 35 Bryant street, Dr. Alfred F. W. Schmidt, for 32 years on the faculty of George Washington, who will retire next September as director of the division of library science, keeps a carefully preserved wasps nest. Dr. Schmidt is never without one. It represents to him the foundation of the modern library, to the study of which he has devoted his life. He unwraps the wasps' nest and looks at it affectionately.

"It is sort of a household god," he said yesterday. "Keeping one always in my study is a rite and a ceremony. We should be very grateful to the wasps."

Dr. Schmidt, 65, will devote the rest of his life to writing a history of libraries the world over from the beginning of time. Individual nations have excellent library histories of their own, but the development of a general history embracing all lands and times is not often undertaken.

The oldest known public library flourished about 700 B. C. in the great city of Nineveh, in the Assyro-Babylonian culture under the regime of Asuri-bani-pal.

Its books were stone tablets, and the public probably had access to most of them, Dr. Schmidt said yesterday.

"There was no taking them home, though," he laughed.

Dr. Schmidt believes the service of the Library of Congress is the most efficient in the world.

It is Dr. Schmidt's hope that archeologists, unearthing the libraries of today 2,000 years hence, will not find a record of destruction and the grotesquery of war in a machine age.

"A world war would possibly destroy the great libraries of the globe," he sighed.

Tuesday night Dr. Schmidt will be tendered a banquet by the George Washington Library Science Alumni Association. He came to Washington from Leland Stanford in 1905 and for years was an instructor in German. He became professor of library science in 1925.

From 1913 to 1925 Dr. Schmidt was chief assistant assistant classifier at the Library of Congress.

"My hobby is my work—books, books, books," he smiled.

"What recreation could be greater? I need no other, anyhow."

So Dr. Schmidt, whose daughter, Miss Martha Schmidt, is the librarian of the National Republican Party, soon will be off to his summer home at Herring Bay, where he will begin analyzing the data of library history he has assembled during the decades.

Scientist Foucher Links Man's Life, Einstein's Theory

By the United Press.

Scientist Robert Foucher has discovered an "incontrovertible" link between the Einstein theory and human biology, he told the United Press yesterday.

Foucher, who periodically pickets Carnegie Institution headquarters here to condemn the institution's refusal to accept his scientific discoveries, said he has proved life a "system" rather than a "thing."

The secret of life, according to Foucher, is its form of organization, and there is no relation between the organization of life in a one-celled creature and in a human being.

"This disproves Darwin's theory of evolution, and carries Einstein's theory of matter into the field of living things," he said.

Methodists in N. Y. Assail Neutrality

New York, June 5 (AP).—Co-operation by "labor and progressive forces in every country" to shut off economic aid to "aggressor nations" was recommended today by the Methodist Federation for Social Service in a report on the international situation.

The report held neutrality and non-intervention "aid the Fascist powers," criticized the policy of British Prime Minister Chamberlain, and said "there is no hope for peace in the Chamberlain policy of seeking appeasement by granting concessions to the aggressor."

Dr. Byford Dead; NotedGynecologist

He was the author of several standard works on gynecology and obstetrics and was a former honorary president of the International Congress of Gynecology and Obstretrics. From 1892 to 1914 he headed the department of gynecology at the University of Illinois medical school.

Pants Captured; Man Who Left Them Free

With the wind went the mysterious nude man in Meridian Hill Park yesterday, but not his clothes.

A telephone message to Park Police that a nude colored man was running through the park, brought Sergt. Grover Shoemaker.

A thorough search of the park by the sergeant disclosed: One pair of pants, one shirt, two shoes, one belt, one hat with the initials, B. T., and $5 in cash—but no nude man. The articles are at Park Police headquarters.

Foreclosures Decline 23.2 Pct. in 4 Months

By the Associated Press.

Real estate foreclosures in metropolitan cities declined 23.2 per cent during the first four months of this year, compared with the similar period of 1937, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported yesterday.

Rep. Gray to Discuss Depression Over Air

Representative Finly H. Gray (Democrat), of Indiana, will speak tonight over station WOL at 9 o'clock on "Cause of World Depression."

He said another address, transcribed on records, is now being broadcast over 113 radio stations throughout the country. This speech, he said, urges that Congress remain in session "until something is done for recovery."

Iowa Primaries on Air.

Washington will be able to follow the progress of the Iowa primary by tuning in Stations WRC or WMAL tonight. H. R. Baukhage, Washington correspondent and National Broadcasting System commentator, will make frequent reports on the results of the voting.

Spitz Treks 600 Miles And Finds His Master

Houston, Tex., June 5 (AP).—Snowball, a spitz dog, found his master here today after a 600-mile trek from Odessa, Tex. The dog, footsore and lean, crawled into the yard of Walter Clack. Clack said the dog strayed away in Odessa on March 13.
